

A fibula is a sort of Roman safety pin. Fibulae were used by both men and women to pin together clothing at the left shoulder. These are simply made and undecorated, suitable for daily life but not necessarily for a social occasion.