

This Byzantine period building (fourth and fifth centuries C.E.) of white limestone is one of the most stunning synagogues in Israel. Through this reconstructed central portal, we see the main worship area toward the back. Originally the building had columns on three sides, like those seen standing intact on the back wall. One of the columns bears a dedicatory inscription in Greek honoring a certain Herod (not the king) for donating the column.