SHAREWARE

Shareware is commercial software that you can try out before having to pay for it. Shareware is distributed by BBS's (bulletin board systems), on diskette or CD-ROM by distributors, or by copies passed around among friends.

Trying out the software allows you to determine whether it suits your needs and whether it runs correctly in your specific environment. At the end of the trial period, if the software suits your needs and if you decide to continue using it, you should purchase a licence. The shareware software and its documentation is complete and no essential piece of functionality has been removed. This should help you to make your registration decision with full knowledge of the facts.

However, the registration not only gets you the latest version of the product, sometimes it gives you additional functions and/or bonus software. It also allows you to get support and/or provision of new versions and/or a printed manual.

The benefit of the shareware system is that it stimulates the creation of software, giving you the user a wide choice of software and also an opportunities to try out the program. It also allows software to be offered at an affordable prices and in most case you will get better software support, due to a direct relation between the author and the user. A number of products that are now available on the market would never have been born without this type of distribution.

By registering these products you are helping to promoting the creation of affordable-priced software, and, in this way, you are helping yourself.
