Overview

The I Ching, or, "Classic of Change", is one of the oldest known documents in the world. It can be traced as far back as 3000 years in written form, and the Chinese claim that it was passed down as oral tradition for two thousand years before that.

Its longevity isn't the only wonder the I Ching holds claim to. It also possesses the uncanny ability to actually communicate with anyone who chooses to use it.

This is no fortune-telling gimmick -- in fact, the I Ching often frustrates attempts to divine the future from its pages. This oracle is solely concerned with the present -- YOUR present.

It takes you past the tunnel vision and gives you a 360 degree view of your situation. It goes beyond the realm of your five senses and picks up the subliminal signals that sailed right past your conscious awareness to become filed away in your subconscious. When you are obsessed with a desire, intent on an outcome, the I Ching gently nudges you and says,

"Yes, but have you considered this ...?"

This classic's ability to accurately gauge a situation probably seemed like a gift from the gods to the sages who discovered it -- and in a sense, it is. But modern science is progressively removing the layers of superstition from its legend and replacing it with new understanding that is no less magical.

Like all oracles of the ancient world, the I Ching's message is cloaked in ambiguity. What makes this oracle ingenious, though, is that its symbols spark the universal archetypes embedded within the Collective Unconscious we all share. The books of C. G. Jung, the father of modern psychoanalysis, shed light on these archetypes -- a subject much too complex to address here. For a quick study, try the entertaining and enlightening writings of Joseph Campbell.

Another secret of the I Ching's accuracy is its division into 64 sections, representing every situation in life that one might find oneself in. What is truly brilliant about this classic's formula is that every one of these 64 situations can change into any one of the other 63! Thus the classic's name, Change.

Yin/Yang

The I Ching illuminates the principles of the Tao, the universal flow that underlies all action and permeates all being. These principles are most easily measured in the material world by yin and yang, the polar opposites. It is the degree of yin and yang present in each of the 64 situations that defines it.

Each polarity helps define a situation, action, or being with its own respective traits, some of which are listed below.

Lines

In the I Ching, the amount of yin or yang present in a given situation is represented by the lines making up that situation's hexagram.

A solid line --  -- represents yang.

A broken line --  -- represents yin.

If a dot --  -- follows either a yin or yang line, that line is a changing line, which will transform into its polar opposite during the course of your consultation.

Lines in your consultation are determined by each of six coin throws.

Trigrams

A trigram is made up of any combination of three yin and yang lines. There are eight possible combinations, each with its own distinct attributes:

Ch'ien/Heaven

Chen/Thunder

K'an/Water

Ken/Mountain

K'un/Earth

Sun/Wind

Li/Fire

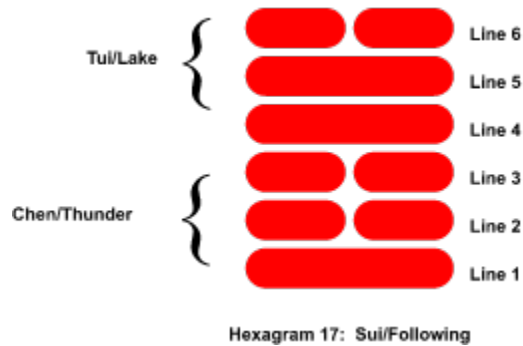

Tui/Lake

Hexagrams

A hexagram is made up of two trigrams, one atop the other:

It is read line-by-line, from bottom to top. There are 64 hexagrams in all, each representing an archetypal situation in life.

The meaning of each hexagram is affected by the presence of changing lines, which in turn point the way to a second, transformed hexagram.

In all, there are 4,096 possible core readings.

With the inclusion of symbols, nuclear trigrams, and other factors, the interpretation possibilities are pushed into the tens of millions.

When consulting the I Ching oracle, a hexagram is built one line at a time, from the bottom up, by throwing three coins. One side of the coin represents yin -- , the other, yang --

Throwing three coins at once makes four combinations possible:

It is natural to assume that, if Earth above Heaven forms the hexagram for Peace and Paradise, then the opposite configuration, with Heaven over Earth would represent the antithesis of Paradise, Hell. Not so. This hexagram is actually the Dark side of Peace, its unsavory byproduct, Stagnation. In a time

The full text of the I Ching can be accessed in hypertext form from the Book of Changes category on the menu bar. In the Contents section, the 64 hexagrams are divided into eight categories, according to their dominant trigram element. Each listing includes the hexagram's six changing lines.

Separate contents cover the eight trigrams of the I Ching, giving a full listing of the attributes of each.

The hypertext Book of Changes also features a comprehensive Search index, giving quick access to an individual hexagram or situation topic.

Morning Devotional

Analysis of the Situation

Decision-Making

Brainstorming

Evening Review of the Day

Morning Devotional

There is no daily affirmation better than a personal morning reading from the I Ching. By asking something as simple as what influences to watch for in the day ahead, you can trace the patterns, movements, and cycles in the environment around you, noticing subtle signs that you would have missed before, and that remain unseen by others around you.

This practice becomes a discipline that builds a heightened awareness.

Analysis of the Situation

Analysis is what the I Ching oracle does best. Tapping your subconscious mind, the oracle puts your conscious mind in touch with information that is normally inaccessible. You get a much more rounded, intuitive view of the situation. From this vantage point, you can position yourself correctly to receive the benefits and deftly dodge the perils. This will seem absolutely magical to those around you. It is the same intuition used by the finest martial artists.

When consulting the I Ching Empower Tool about a situation in the material world, make your question as literal and to-the-point as possible. Use the names of the principals in the situation when formulating the question. Ask exactly what you want to know. Don't flower it up or beat around the bush.

Decision-Making

The great Chinese warrior, Sun Tzu was heavily influenced by the I Ching when he wrote his brilliant Art of War, 2500 years ago. Yet he would not let his officers consult the oracle when mapping strategy. Why?

Because his lieutenants had fallen into the same trap that threatens anyone who uses the I Ching -- they began to use it for fortune-telling. They would look for omens. They would cast the coins to ask what direction to march, and read only the symbolic direction. They were not tapping their own deeper knowledge with the tool.

Do not fall into this trap. This is not a Ouija board. There is no magic here. This is a great psychological tool, if properly used. Don't get lazy and ask it to lead you. Hope that it keeps challenging you to reach for the grain of truth within the ambiguity of its symbols. After a long consultation with the Empower Tool, you will emerge confident in the decision you have reached.

When trying to reach a decision, ask the oracle hard questions. Are you right in your position? What are the most likely consequences of each direction that might be taken? What is the ethical choice? What might be lost besides the obvious? Where is your adversary most vulnerable? What is the path of least resistance? Is the prize worth the pain? Are there unconsidered alternatives?

Brainstorming

No idea-generating tool offers better penetration to the Collective Unconscious than the I Ching. The hundreds of symbols of the trigrams combine in random pairings when hexagrams are cast. The combinations possible number in the tens of millions.

Try some pairings: Take the animal symbol of the upper trigram and a miscellaneous symbol from the lower. Or vice versa. What do these word pictures spark in your subconscious? Who comes to mind? What setting do you see in your mind's eye? Try some other symbols? In the situation you ask about, who is the Eldest Son? Or what lies to the east? Or who has the traits of a mare? What is colored yellow? Or scarlet?

Where would the gentle penetration of the wind or the arousing might of the thunder be most useful? Who would be the Gypsy? Or the Sorceress?

Evening Review of the Day

The I Ching Empower Tool is a good soother of nerves in the evening, or before bed. Consult the oracle about events that occurred during the day. Ask it to give insight to elements that led up to events. Or what the outcome of a situation will most likely be. Or what another person's motivation might have been for an action taken or comment made. The possibilities are as endless as the events that might occur in the course of your day. By contemplating your day with the help of the oracle, you gain a mindfulness that calms you and puts you more in control of your faculties.

Also, subjects that you think about just before sleep are often dreamed about, giving your subconscious mind even more time to work with a situation you've focused on.

Help with Your Question

Careful consideration of your question before consulting the I Ching will add to the accuracy of the answer you receive. Formulating your own question is the surest way to receive a personally specific reading. If you are at a loss for the right words, though, the Empower Tool offers five categories of questions to help you sharpen your focus:

General
Career and Fortune
Relationships
Self and Spirit
Strategy

To access the question files, press the "Help With Your Question" button on the question entry screen.

Step-By-Step Instructions

Following these simple steps will guide you through a complete consultation with the I Ching Empower Tool.

It is advised that you print out these instructions and keep them at hand for your first few times using the Empower Tool. On-line help is available at any point during your reading, from the menu bar when in main windows, or by clicking on the Help button in any secondary window.

Each of these steps is followed by a green hypertext reference that will jump to more information on the subject covered. To return to these steps, simply press the "Back" button on the top bar.

Step 1:

At the Opening Screen, click on the Reading button. This will advance you to the Question Screen.

Step 2:

You are now at the Question Screen. Enter your first and/or last names. This step is optional. If you do not wish to enter a name, press the Return or Enter key on your keyboard twice, to move the cursor to the Enter Question box.

Step 3:

Type in your question, or click on the bar that reads "Help with Your Question", instead. Pressing the bar will access the five question lists available in the I Ching Empower Tool.

Using these question lists is advised for your first few readings.

Step 4:

Pressing the "Help with Your Question" bar calls up the Question List Screen. Click the down arrow on the roll-up bar at the bottom center of this screen to choose a question category. This will change the question list to your chosen category.

Step 5:

Click on a question from the scrollable list. This will drop you back to the main Question Screen. Question List Screen

Step 6:

If your question contains a blank, you can fill it in with a name or other subject of your inquiry. Question Screen

Click on the Continue button to advance to the next stage of your consultation.

Step 7:

You are now in the Coin Throw Screen. Your question appears at the bottom of the screen. Click on the "Throw" button. Three Chinese coin faces appear to the left, turning up either their yin or yang face. The I Ching line that corresponds to this coin combination appears to the right. Repeat this Throw step five more times, building a six-line hexagram from the bottom up.

Step 8:

Once you have completed your hexagram, click on the "Read" button to advance to the interpretation. Coin Throw Screen

Step 9:

You have now come to the Cast Hexagram Screen. The passage at the right is the traditional reading associated with the hexagram you just threw. This begins the answer to your question, often explaining the situation you are now in, or what has gone before.

To the left is your hexagram. If one or more of the lines is flashing, press the "Changing Lines" button, to move to the next part of your answer. Note: Some cast hexagrams contain no changing lines. In such a case, the full answer to your question lies in the passage given on this screen.

Step 10:

Pressing the "Changing Lines" button brings you now to the Changing Lines Screen. You again see your hexagram to the left, then a column of six buttons on the right.

Press the line buttons beside any changing lines in the hexagram. A new passage will appear for each changing line.

Changing line passages usually suggest action to take or to avoid under the circumstances of the situation indicated by the hexagram.

After studying the advice of each changing line, press the "Transformed Hexagram" button to advance to the final part of your reading.

Step 11:

You have now come to the Transformed Hexagram Screen. This is the hexagram formed when the changing lines have transformed into their opposites. The red illustration now shows your new hexagram. The passage to the right is the traditional reading for this hexagram.

The transformed hexagram usually shows where the current factors of your situation are leading.

Step 12:

You can print your consultation by clicking on the "Print" button on the screen, or by choosing the Print command from the File menu.

The printout will contain the date, your name (if entered), your question, the cast hexagram and its changing lines, and the transformed hexagram.

Step 13:

You have reached the end of the current reading. You now have two choices, either to exit the program, or to ask a new question. Buttons for both choice can be found just below the menu bar. But before making either choice, you should consider whether you want to save the reading you have just finished. Transformed Hexagram Screen

Step 14:

To save the current reading, simply click the "Save Reading" button in the cluster below the hexagram. Transformed Hexagram Screen

Step 15:

If you chose the "Ask A New Question" button, you have now dropped back to the Opening Screen. To ask another question, click on the "Reading" button, and simply repeat these steps.
