Welcome!

Welcome to the "Designed For Microsoft® Windows® 95" Product Catalog, your official guide to products that have been designed specifically for Windows 95.

You've just invested in the latest technology. Now, how can you be sure you're taking full advantage of it? Easy. Just look for the Logo that says a product is designed for Windows 95.

The "Designed For Microsoft Windows 95" Logo® on a product signals to customers that the product is not only compatible with, but specifically designed to make the most of the technology built into Windows 95. With the Windows 95 Logo you can be assured of choosing a product built to make the most of Windows 95, to make your computing easier and more powerful.

This catalog was first created on August 17, 1995. It will be updated approximately every two weeks, therefore the most recently Logo'd products may not appear until the next catalog update. So keep checking the catalog for the latest products Designed For Microsoft Windows 95!

Last Update: 10-27-95

Using This Catalog

Organization

This catalog is primarily organized by product category. Products are first separated into Software and Hardware. The Software category is then subdivided into 18 broad classes of applications. The Hardware category is subdivided into eight broad classes of hardware devices.

Navigation

The Contents button at the top of the catalog's window returns you to the beginning of the catalog.

The Browse Buttons, "<< >>", located at the top of the catalog's window, are the primary means of scrolling through the catalog.

The catalog is easy to search for names or keywords; use the Search at the top of the catalog's window.

Printing

To print a page in this catalog use the Print button at the top of the catalog's window.

Who Gets The New Logo?

To earn the "Designed For Microsoft Windows 95" Logo, software products must be 32-bit Windows-based applications, providing better multitasking and application robustness. Applications with the Windows 95 Logo will also feature the enhanced user interface of Windows 95, support for long filenames, automated installation, test on Windows NT®, and uninstall capability. Many applications, especially typical productivity applications, will also support OLE component technology, providing better cross-application interoperability and efficiency through features such as OLE Drag and Drop.

To earn the "Designed For Microsoft Windows 95" Logo, the baseline criterion for hardware products, including PC systems and subsystems, is support for Plug and Play in Windows 95. Until now, installing new hardware devices has required substantial technical expertise to configure and load hardware and software. Plug and Play in Windows 95 provides a mechanism for all this configuration to happen automatically. Computers, add-on boards, and peripheral devices supporting Plug and Play bring true ease of use to customers of Windows 95.

Note: Product descriptions contained in this catalog are submitted by the companies themselves. Microsoft does not guarantee the accuracy of these descriptions, only that the products have received the Windows 95 Logo. Microsoft Corporation does not warrant any of the products contained in this catalog, and does not endorse or approve the use of names or trademarks of the third-party products contained in the catalog.

How Can Vendors Apply For The New Logo?

Software vendors interested in applying for the "Designed For Microsoft Windows 95" Logo on their products should request a pre-testing kit from the Windows Logo

Department:

by email: "winlogo@microsoft.com"
by fax: (206) 936-7329, Attn.: Windows Logo Department
by phone: (206) 936-2880
by mail: Microsoft Corporation
Attn.: Windows Logo Department, Bldg. 20
Redmond, WA 98052-6399

Hardware vendors and PC manufacturers interested in applying for the "Designed For Microsoft Windows 95" Logo on their products should request a pre-testing kit from the Microsoft Compatibility Labs:

by email: "mclinfo@microsoft.com"
by fax: (206) 936-7329, Attn.: Microsoft Compatibility Labs
by phone: (206) 635-4949
by mail: Microsoft Corporation
Attn.: Microsoft Compatibility Labs, Bldg. 20
Redmond, WA 98052-6399

Book Publishers and Retailers should contact the Windows Logo Department as described above under "Software Vendors".
