The Edit menu contains the standard editing commands Cut, Copy, Paste, and

Delete.   These commands serve two purposes.   The first is to let you edit text when typing a particle's name or when editing the Document Description text which is described further in the help.   It is for the multi-media text   in the Document Description that the spell checking is provided.

The second use is to copy, cut and paste particles.   Once a particle has become first responder by clicking on it, or dragging it, the particle can be copied, pasted, or cut.   If you perform a copy and paste, a new particle will be created with the same attributes of the copied particle, but it's initial position will be displaced positive on the x-axis, and negative on the y-axis.

One special copy option is available when a World View window is the current main window and the first responder is itself.   When this is the case, choosing Copy will copy the current World View's picture into the pasteboard in encapsulated postscript format (.eps) for subsequent pasting into other applications like Edit, Icon, or Preview.
