

Date: Sat, 16 Jul 94 16:00 MET DST
From: ingmar@aurora.in-berlin.de (Ingmar Camphausen)
To: Michael_Pizolato@afs.com
Subject: Re: Baseball icons and tiffs
Cc: next-icon@gun.com
Reply-To: ingmar@aurora.in-berlin.de

Hi Michael,

I got your posting to the next-icon-list, and I wondered about the very sameÐseems as if there's been no traffic during the last days (weeks?).

Well then, I'll have a try. Hope you will like my BSD Unix daemon (based on the b&w PostScript drawing that was sent to the icon-list by Bob Bajwa <bajwa@vnus.bc.ca> last September):

Does anybody have some nice fire/flame icon or .tiff to make a really "hellish" background for the .opendir.tiff?

Ingmar

Ingmar Camphausen	Technical University of Berlin, Computer Science
	Sekr. FR 2±2, Franklinstr. 28/29, D±10587 Berlin ingmar@cs.tu-berlin.de
ingmar@aurora.in-berlin.de (NeXTmail ok, PGP mail here)	PGP-KEY AVAILABLE

From: Allan Noordvyk <allan@cetus.ali.bc.ca>
Date: Fri, 3 Feb 95 10:25:41 -0800
To: Timothy Reed <treed@bmt.gun.com>
Subject: Re: Devil's Advocate
Cc: next-icon@gun.com
Reply-To: allan@cetus.ali.bc.ca

Here's a colorized and shrunken version of an eps someone posted a long while ago of the BSD Daemon....

<LilDaemon.tiff>

Date: Tue, 24 Oct 95 11:29:26 +0100
Reply-To: Felix.Rauch@nice.ch
From: Felix Rauch <Felix.Rauch@harka.limmat.net.ch>
To: next-icon@gun.com
Subject: The BSD-Daemon I made available via ftp...

I have been pointed to the fact that there is a copyright on that daemon. So I asked Marshall Kirk McKusick whether it's ok to make that picture publicly available (after doing so :-/) and he sad yes.
Please note the following copyright statement.

- Felix

=====

Statement on the Use of the BSD Daemon Figure:

Individuals may use the daemon for their personal use within the bounds of good taste (an example of bad taste was a picture of the BSD daemon blowtorching a Solaris logo). When reasonably possible, I would like the text ``BSD Daemon Copyright 1988 by Marshall Kirk McKusick. All Rights Reserved." to be included. This text need not be etched into the figure or garishly displayed when using the daemon as say an Icon in a mosaic window. A good example of how to handle the due credit in a web page is to create a link from the daemon picture to the following text:

BSD Daemon Copyright 1988 by Marshall Kirk McKusick.
All Rights Reserved.

Permission to use the daemon may be obtained from:
Marshall Kirk McKusick
1614 Oxford St
Berkeley, CA 94709-1608
USA
or via email at mckusick@mckusick.com

If you are looking for daemon images, a pictorial history of the daemon can be found at <http://www.zilker.net/users/beastie/index.html>.

If you want to mass produce the daemon on Tshirts, CDROM's, etc you need to request permission in advance. In general, I require that the daemon be used in an appropriate way. This means that it has to be something related to BSD and not expropriated as a company logo (though I do allow companies with BSD-based products such as Walnut Creek CDROM or BSDI to use it). I regret having to be so legalistic about the daemon, but I almost lost the daemon to a certain large company because I failed to show due dilligence in protecting it. So, I've taken due dilligence seriously since then.

Marshall Kirk McKusick