Here's an Icon

And this is my version for our (ID's) value analysis tool - (idea on how to change it about a bit - the rotation is 18° for those who don't want to clean the blood off. :-)

"Software grows by desire - be it the salesmen's or the users'.

There is a wave of desire from users - about to be launched by Expo - that is going to swamp the old tech vendors in the act of battenning down their hatches. (that is Desire for cool, user easy and pleasurable communications tools.-)

This wave is going to be ridden by the new"

I used to do Aikido, and this made a nice addition to my .dir.tiff:

(still under construction)

Thanks to the original poster!

Something photo-real would be nice. This is going onto a shareware app we're releasing that will do flat-file phonebook stuff. It can live side-by-side with perl scripts, etc., so is pretty nice. Also does some cool intelligent field parsing. Anyway, I need a nice app icon for it, and can't draw telephones very well.

(I'm out of icons so I have to include a selection from my sig).

I'm in need of Icons of Medieval Weapons, especially swords and shields for an application. I looked through the archive but couldn't find any, since someone once suggested that they were there. If they are, would someone please point me in the right direction. If not, and you have some, please post them. Thanks!

You'll probably want to resize and clean it up a bit.

Beautiful sword. Here it is scaled and rotated (I had to make it fatter so that the handle would show up).

I decided I wanted to play some last night... so I shrunk that image down and rotated it!

I reduced Jeff Martin's fat sword and crossed it with another:

And some freshly used swords, recently hung back up on the wall
