Warf may be in color. I don't know (and really don't care to know) 'cause I have a monochrome 'station.

The first four were made with IconBuilder. Warf was downloaded from wuarchive, shrunk with ImageViewer, and then Grab.app'ed. (Does anyone really care?)

I see your Spock and raise a Kirk. Do I hear a McCoy, Sulu or Uhura? Scotty would be nice, also.

A friend sent these to me. Guess they came from some other mailing list (next-med maybe?). Anyway, I thought people on this list would get a kick out of them. Besides, these belong in the archive...

Here are a couple of arrowhead icons I've worked up, colored, and shaded a little bit. Hope you like em!

This looks good at it's present 64x64, but looks horrible when shrunk by the workspace to 48x48. I haven't been successful at getting better results from scaling in third-party apps, but I just got a cool unreleased app that may do the trick. I'll show the result when I get a chance to try it out.

Subject: A nice Klingon icon

Here's a little image that I 'Grab'bed out of a large Star Trek gif that I found on the net. It makes a nice .dir.tiff for my 'gifs' directory:
<Klingon1.dir.tiff>

Hmm..now that I look at it, I notice that it's rather larger than icon-sized. However, it works great as a .dir.tiff. Now, here's an edited version:
<Klingon1.opendir.tiff>
Enjoy.
