Where is everyone's creative icons?

This list seems to be having a dry spell. Since there is not much going on, I thought I would mail some icons I made when I first got my Color Station.

I was planning to make all my .dir.tiffs I could into common street signs.

You could have the playground (messing around dir), school (for edu stuff), construction (work dir), etc.

Here are the ones I have done so far:

... in 2 bit grey. The triangles should be red. Maybe someone with a color station could correct this.

Highway imagery that didn't work out. Scanned from my copy of the Visual Encyclopedia - early rejects when we were working on an application icon for our UUCP setup software Connect It! I think that I did this with PowerScan and reduced it with Appsoft Image.

Reply-To: allan@ali.bc.ca

The beta version of WetPaint I am using right now also has this moving Alpha-Pattern feature. It is invoked by holding down the ESC key. I don't know if the earlier version supported this, but I have found it to be invaluable on numerous occasions.

I won't repeat David Hamilton's keyboard and Grab.app finger-gymnastics since WetPaint's pattern looks pretty much identical to the one he's shown everyone. However, since this is the next-icon mailing list I'll throw an icon in:

Someone mailed out a Temporary Parking sign a while ago which I have been using for my temporary directory TIFF. The icon above is an anti-aliased version that is less jaggy than its progenitor.
