Stealing from good sources is everything, to paraphrase T.S. Eliot, the unwedded mother of object-oriented poetry.

These icons were stolen fair and square and are here redistributed in the same spirit. (Maybe we should have an Icon source scavenger contest: "I can name that icon's antecedent in three cycles or less...")

Sorry for the bandwidth for those of you paying by the byte, and also to those of you in the monochromatic modality...

Please enjoy.

```
The colored balls came from the NeXTWORLD Drag and Drop Lab, a miniexample for folks like me who are just getting their feet wet
```

with NeXTSTEP programming.

The Renderman tiffs came from Allegheny College--I initially ftp'd there to pick up their File Saver and File Retriever objects (again, for the above reason).

And Jupiter came from Sam Streeper's new game, Xox.app, which can be found at sonata. I haven't had much time to play with it, but I sneaked inside the app wrapper to grab this one.

All absolutely not mine, all absolutely not original...
Hope they find a happy home in your browser.

P.S. How do you feel about the obsolescence of your hardware?
I don't mind, it's just a little embarrassing for Motorola (again...).

Later,

Michael

Abstract:
These are my abstract and abbstract open just to liven up things.

I hope they are of use to someone...have fun.

_____

B.Olav Anderson
Autodidact
NeXTSTEP Cyber Cruzer
e-mail olav@emerson.physics.ubc.ca

"I know of no more encouraging fact than the unquestionable ability of man to elevate his life by a conscious endeavour."
H.D.Thoreau