

We need to explore space in order to find out how our solar system was created and to learn how the planets move and change rotations. This information is crucial if we want to build the spacecrafts that will eventually take us to all the planets in our solar system.