

Disclaimer & Legal Matters:

Every effort has been made to ensure the timeliness and accuracy for each of the URL's listed in the text and on the CD. It is important to realize that the Internet is very organic and dynamic, a viable website can be here today and literally gone tomorrow. Many times, web sites disappear for a variety of reasons, mergers, acquisitions, revamps and site overhauls and even lack of funds or traffic.

The results in this book are as unbiased as humanly possible, and no company or agency influenced the making of this book and CD. The book and CD were a result of my sincere efforts as a career educator to help empower the next generation of fashion professionals to make the most of their online experience.

All of the websites have been tested by independent testers along with BETA testing in the classroom, therefore if any errors have been discovered we encourage you to contact me at my website: www.computersandfashion.com, to report any new findings or suggest corrections.

I believe this book will continue to be an invaluable resource as a creative professional and thus I encourage you to send your comments or suggestions.

Long hours of time have gone into providing you with the most complete bank of research and resource URL's available today. Naturally, all the material is copyrighted and you must have written permission to make any copies from the book or CD. I regret that the fashion industry on a whole, does somehow inadvertently teach us that it is ok to steal, when in truth it is not ok.

It is evident in the vocabulary we use as: swipes, rub-offs, and knock-offs, <grin>. However as we have learned over the years, duplicating CD's is illegal and an infringement on the owner's right. Therefore, I sincerely request that you do not make copies of the book or the CD to distribute them with your peers but INSTEAD, kindly encourage them to obtain the text for their own libraries. This act of kindness and honesty is greatly appreciated!

One last thing as you visit any of these sites --- I encourage you to let your peers know you discovered them in this text.

Sincerely,

M. Kathleen Colussy