The line of code across the bottom of the checks you receive from your bank is called MICR (Magnetic Ink Character Recognition). For several years now it has been possible to print this code using a laser printer, special toner, and a MICR font. The printers, however, range in the $5000 to $10,000 range. LexMark and Xerox are two manufacturers of such printers.

MICR toner has rather recently become available for low cost printers including Hewlett-Packard, Okidata and others. In fact, HP recently announced MICR toner and a MICR font for their printers. This means that you can now print checks on blank stock.

The catch is that MICR fonts will cost over $100 from most sources. To avoid spending that kind of money for every check printing package we produce, we developed our own MICR font. The TrueType font included in this package is produced to ANSI and American Banking Association standards. It has been tested with over 10,000 passes through bank clearing house reader/sorter equipment with no rejects. We use the font to produce the checks we write every day.

This MICR font is shareware. You may use it to print checks for your personal use. You may not sell the font either as a stand-alone product or with software you develop. For a registration fee of $29.95 we will send you the font in Adobe Type 1 and several other formats. We will also provide you with information on the MICR line and a MICR gauge to check the layout of your MICR characters.

We license the font to software developers for a one time fee of $2000. You may find MICR fonts at a lower cost, but remember, TrueType allows you to print on any laser printer for which a Windows printer driver exists. You may not sell the MICR fonts as stand-alone products under any circumstances.

CheckMaster Corporation develops check printing software. We can provide development services for one- and two- pass check printing solutions, MICR toner for the majority of available laser printers, and custom logo and signature files - all at very competitive prices.
