REVISITED GENERIC APPLICATION

A revisitation of the classic "Generic Application" of Chapter 2 of the Microsoft Windows "Guide to Programming" book, with inspiration provided by Chuck Petzold's version of the same program.

Except neither "Guide to Programming" nor Chuck Petzold changed the fonts every time you click in the window! I did that in my "Revisited Generic Application!"

It may take a little while each time you click on the form. Don't worry - Windows is having to go get the display font requested! (Notice the disk activity, also!)

LICENSE AND DISCLAIMER

The "Revisited Generic Application" is provided as-is for a learning tool for other Visual Basic programmers. It is © 1991 Charles L. Perrin. Rights granted to all humanity to pass it around, look at it, learn from it, but not sell it as a commercial product! (I doubt that will be the case.)

Usage by any creature from another planet requires special considerations (at least the TV rights to show the alien running Microsoft Windows). If I don't get it, Bill Gates will snarf it up and sell it to "A Current Affair!"
