

Genus Magnolia

There are 2 species of Magnolia native to Indiana. and both are very rare. They have large terminal buds with entire stipule scars on the twigs. Both produce cone-like, upright fruit in the fall. When ripe, the seeds emerge and hang from silken threads.