

Read this before you post to the Usenet News!

- Posting is an important action!

Posted articles can be seen by thousands of people all over the world. Before posting, read the Help on "About Posting", and read the articles in newsgroups news.announce.newusers and news.newusers.questions. As a general guideline, do not post an article until you know what a "flame" is and what ":-)" means.

- Where does an article go?

"dartmouth" n[N]ewsgroups [that start with your institution name ]remain on your site. All others are visible to people around the world, at some cost to each institution. Your name and e-mail address are on every article that you post — if someone is offended, or you post personal information, you may get some unexpected mail in return.

- Practice First!

Post to dartmouth.test[your local ".test" group]. No one cares what happens there.

To keep this window from appearing again soon, hold the option key down when you click the "New Article" button.