The Composing Window

A Composing window is used to compose an article or mail message. It has a top pane for the header information and a bottom pane for the body of the message. A split bar divides the two panes so that you can resize them. Each pane scrolls as well.

Detailed information regarding the use of a Composing window is presented in the help sections about posting articles and sending mail.