

DoubleScroll is not free. You are allowed to use the product for 15 days, after which you should either throw it in the trash can (bad choice) or register it (good choice). If you do not register, a message will come up each time your computer starts up reminding you that the 15 day trial period is over and to register your copy. After registering, you are entitled to free updates to the program. These updates can be downloaded from America Online, CompuServe, and other BBS's around the country (or world). If you do not have access to any of these online services, I will gladly mail a disk with the latest version on it for $3.00 shipping and handling.

VERY IMPORTANT - Version 1.1 and above require a different registration code than 1.0. If you are upgrading from 1.0, just let me know via e-mail or regular mail and I will send you a new registration code immediately. If you have registered 1.1 or later already, no new registration code is needed.

To register your copy, first you need to tell me that you have it. Click the Register... button in the control panel. This will bring up a dialog box giving the address to send your payment of $10 per installed copy. Pressing the "Print Order Form..." button in this dialog box brings up another dialog which you can enter your name and address. After your information is entered, press the "Print" button to print an order form with all your information already entered for you. Just send this form to me, along with the proper payment amount. If you are unable to print an order form, send me a letter with all the information requested in the data entry dialog box. Within 14 days after I receive your payment, I will send you your registration code, which will stop the reminder messages from appearing on startup. Just enter it into the spot in the Register dialog box and you'll be cookin' with gas!

NOTE: CompuServe users can GO SWREG to register their software without resorting to mail.

Contact the author for pricing information on site licences.