

Building Enterprise Client-Server Solutions using Microsoft Solutions Framework

Robert L. Gowdy

Program Manager, Technology Mgmt.
Microsoft Consulting Services

Microsoft Corporation

(206) 936-9938

Internet: rgowdy@microsoft.com

Pre-req: Interest in building client-server applications.

Top 10 IS Challenges

---

Re-engineering through IT

Aligning IS and corporate goals

Improving systems development (1992 - 9th)

Instituting cross-functional systems

Organizing and utilizing data

Cutting IS costs (1992 - 11th)

Creating an information architecture

Updating obsolete systems (1992 - 18th)

Developing an IS strategic plan

Changing technology platforms

Focus Group Survey

---

Different set of skills

Must do rapid prototyping

Must have reusable code

Must have end-user involvement

No well-established infrastructure

Unproven tools, techniques

Politics is “golden rule”

The Business Challenge

---

Develop LOB Applications Faster

More Responsive to End Users

More Responsive to Changes in Business Requirements

Allow for re-engineering business processes

Reduce System Costs

The Technical Challenge

---

Technology Transfer

Selection of Technologies

Structured & Disciplined C/S Design and Development

Re-Engineering

Microsoft's Challenges

---

Robust, feature-rich applications

First on the market with the features users want

Keep price points in line with industry

Key MSF Drivers

---

Applications developed by business units

Client-Server Architecture

Portability and interoperability

Tools will incorporate O-O technology

Architecture, methodology, and infrastructure

Iterative process model

Education and training

MSF as a product!

---

CD-ROM Knowledgebase

Concepts

Guides

Assistants

Topic Locator Database

Topic Editor

Mentor Content Browser

MSF is . . .

---

Tactical

On-line

Extensible

---

Demo of MSF Mentor

Building A Flexible Architecture

---

Business applications

Application architecture

Data architecture

Business
architecture

Technology architecture

Map Methodologies into the Architectural Framework

The MSF Reference Model

MSF: The WOSA of Methodologies

---

ODBC

Common Interface

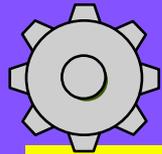

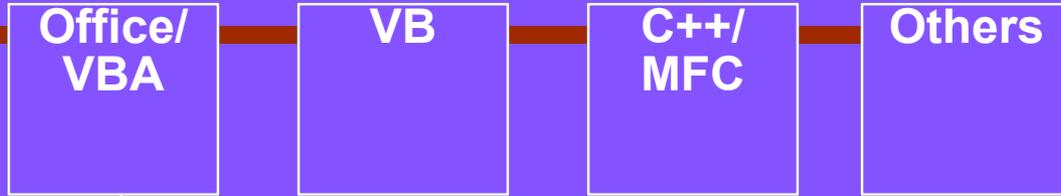

Service Provider Interface

MSF

Common Context

Methodologies, tools, and technologies

The Application Architecture

Client

Client

Server

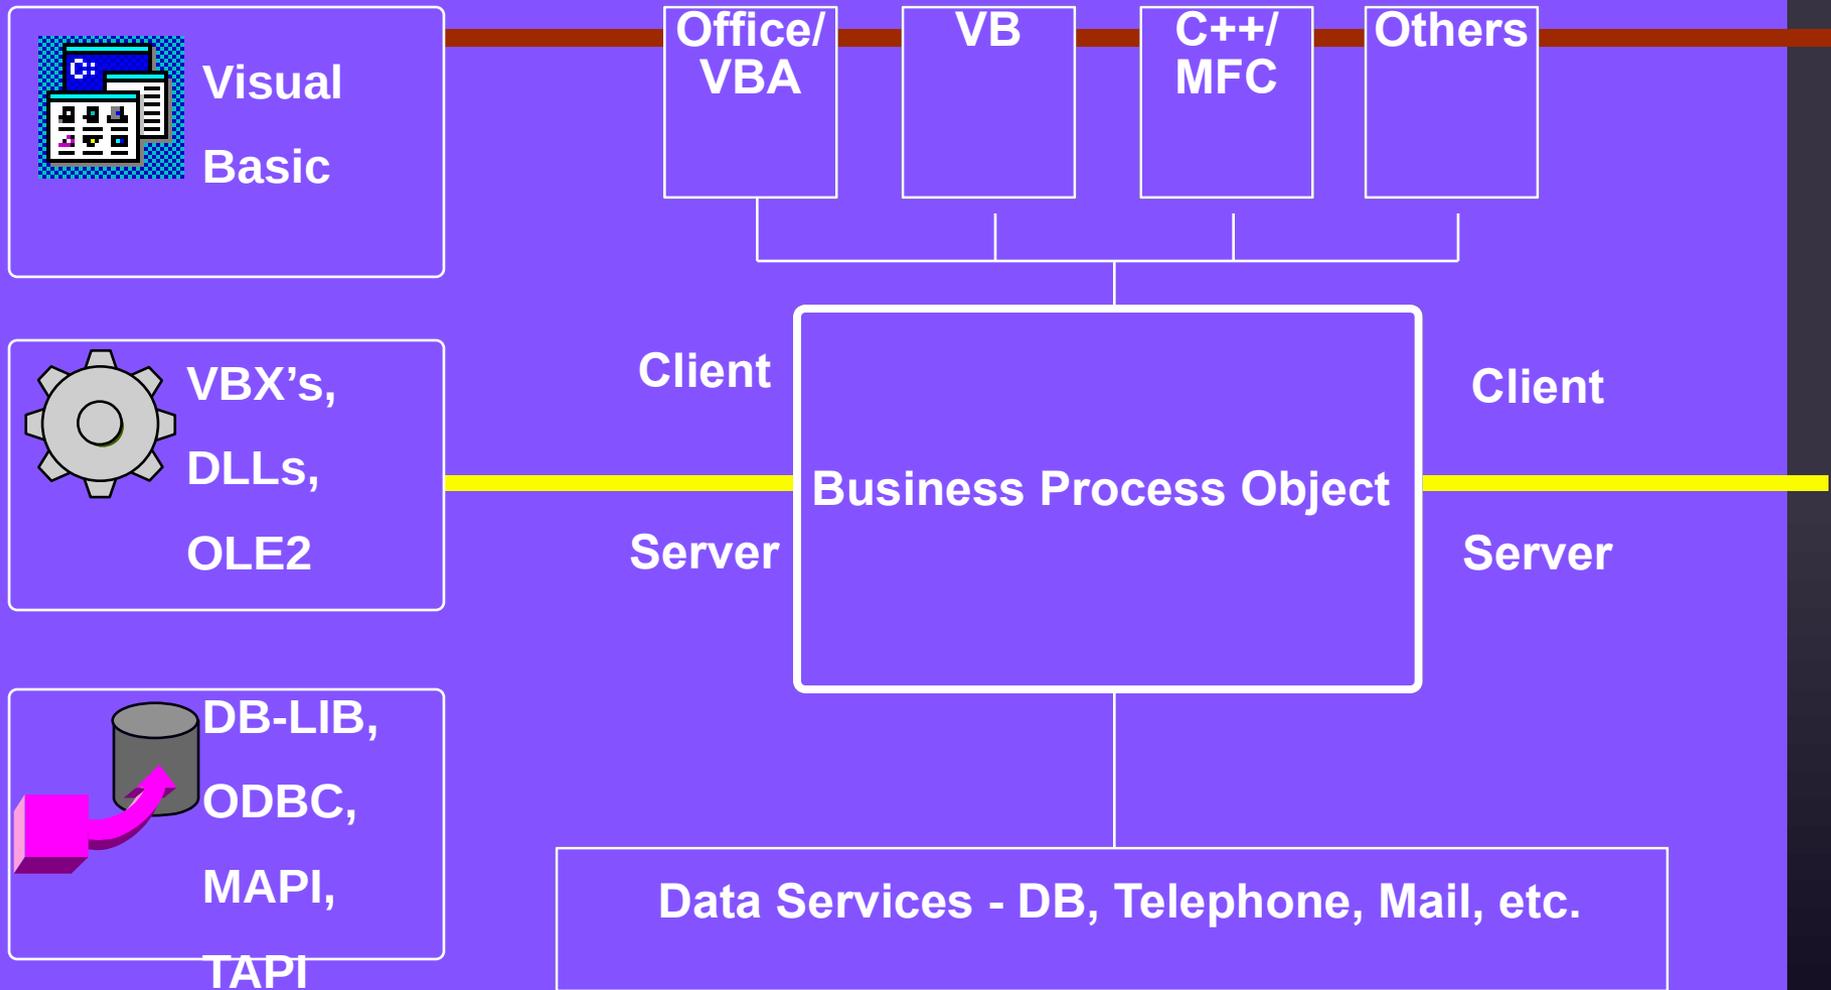

Server

Business Process Object

Data Services - DB, Telephone, Mail, etc.

The Application Architecture

The Application Architecture

---

Customer
Account
Interface

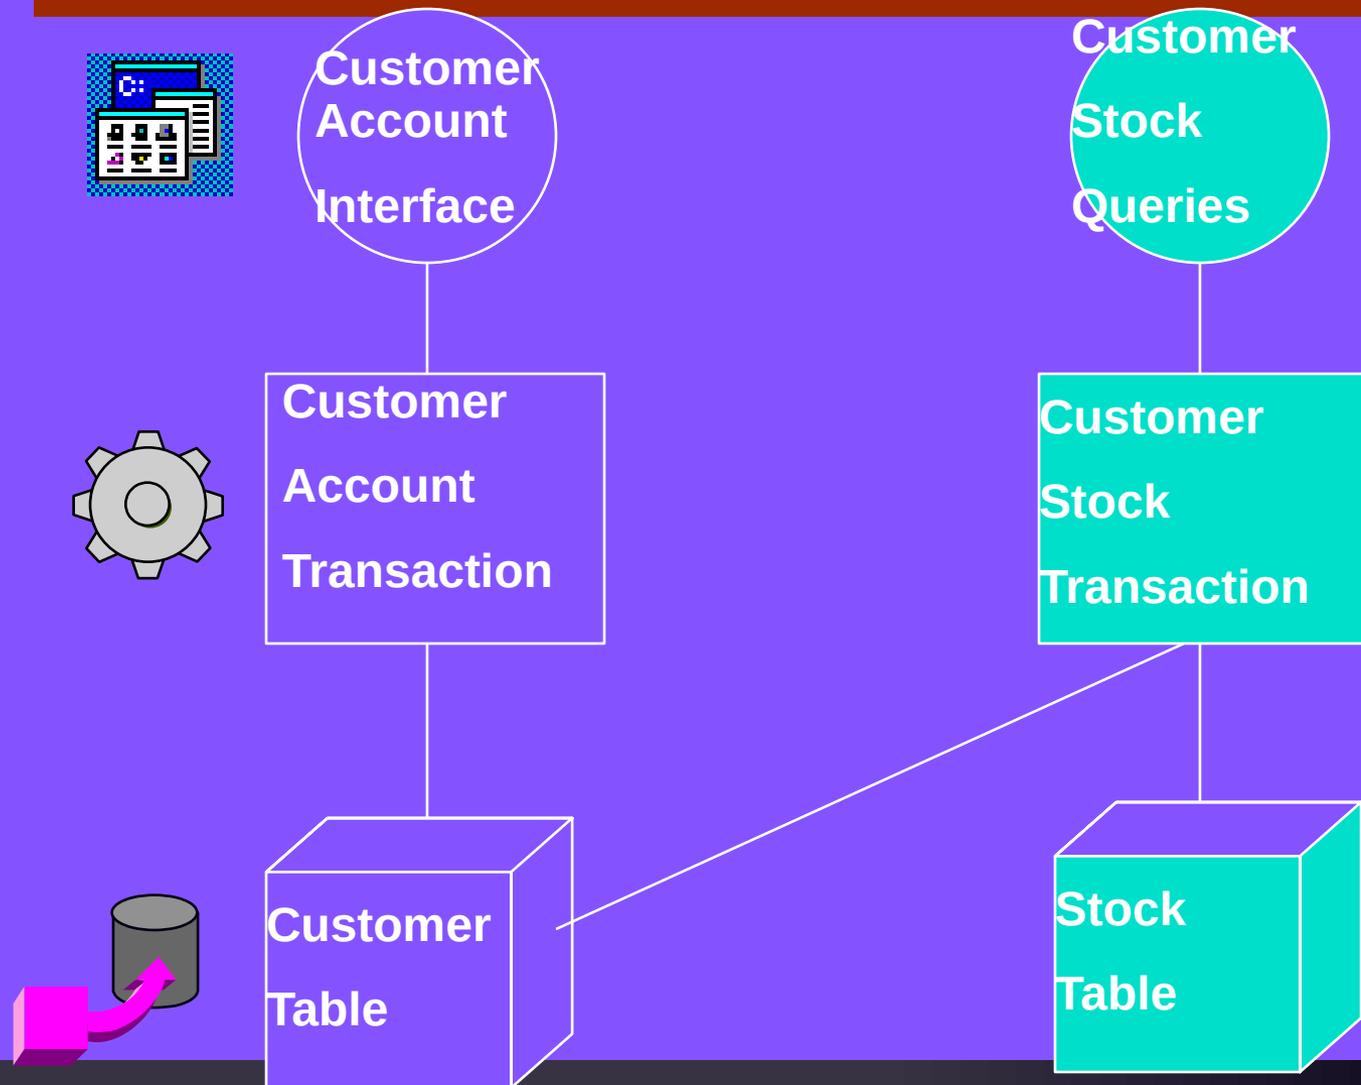

Customer
Account
Transaction

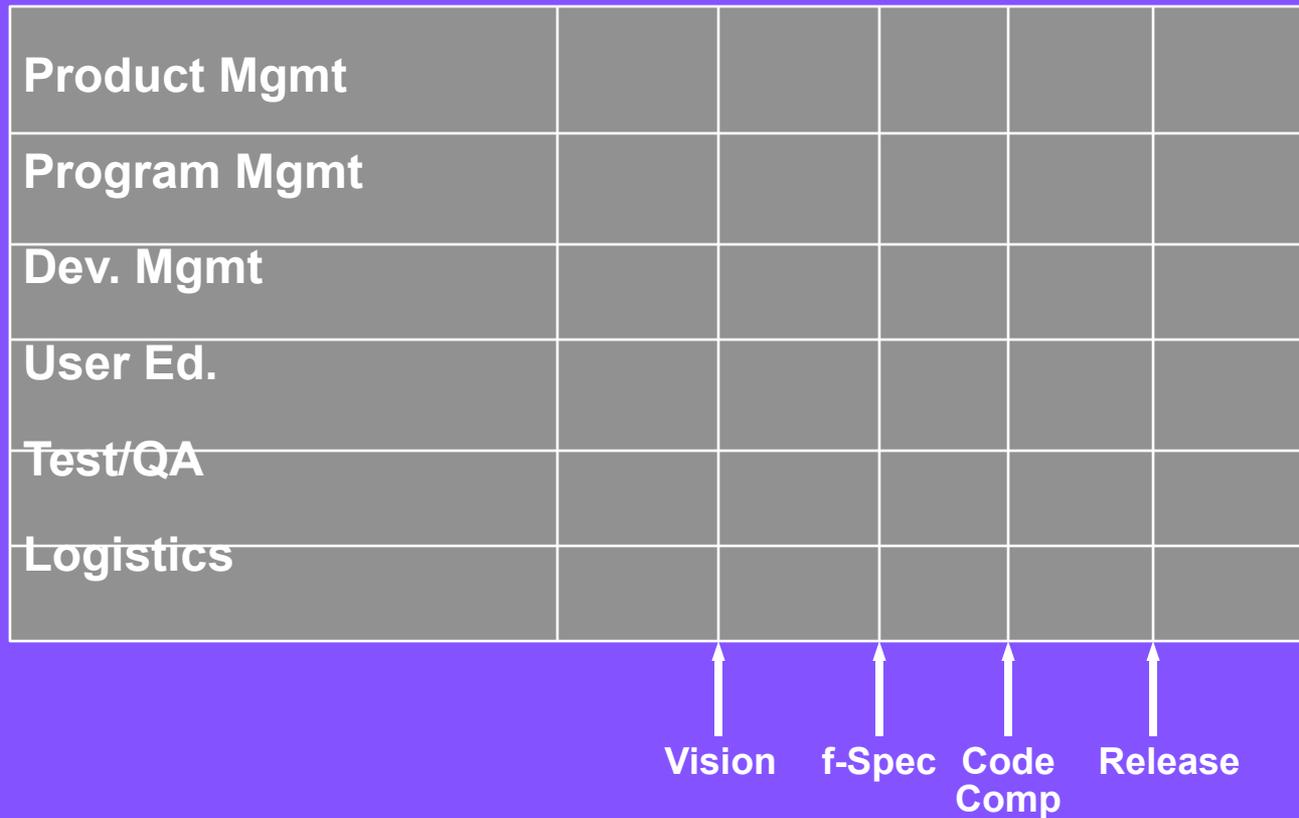

Customer
Table

The Application Architecture

The Development Discipline

---

MSF Roles

Project Manager

```
graph TD; PM[Project Manager] --- L1[ ]; L1 --- L2[ ]; L2 --- PMgmt[Product Mgmt]; L2 --- ProgMgmt[Program Mgmt]; L2 --- Dev[Development]; L2 --- UE[User Education]; L2 --- TestQA[Test/QA]; L2 --- Logistics[Logistics];
```

Product Mgmt: The user representative

Program Mgmt: The IS representative

Development: The programmers

User Education: Training, on-line help, CBT

Test/QA: Standards compliance, unit/system tests

Logistics: Deployment, support, help desks, etc.

Key Factor: All the roles, All the time

DD Key C/S Components

---

Ownership & Empowerment

Risk Driven, Milestone not Task approach

Development is a tool

Interim Releases

Constant capturing and evaluation of requirements

MSF Advantages

---

Early identification and mitigation of risk

User-centric focus

Business & technical flexibility

Common frame of reference between partners

MSF Availability

---

MSF 0.9 Pre-Release CD

Core Concepts Overview

Shipped February 28, 1994

Internal MCS distribution only

Solution Builder Certification Program

MSF Availability

---

MSF 1.0 General Availability

Core Concepts Drill-Down

Guides

Assistants

Ships June, 1994

MSF Availability

---

MSF 2.0 Release CD

Extensible Workbench

Planned December, 1994