

Eagle

by Jeremy Roussak

Eagle is a small (10k) program which is used by Apollo to ask the Finder to open control panels and folders and to launch items from dynamic folder menus. It will only run under system 7. For best results, put it in the "Startup Items" folder in your system folder and forget about it (you can also start it by double-clicking). Once started, Eagle is completely invisible.

Eagle is absolutely no use without Apollo (Apollo, in contrast, is quite handy even without Eagle).
