

Frontier on Internet

In addition to UserLand's CompuServe and AppleLink on-line services, users of the Internet and BITNET have access to an electronic mail bulletin board that focuses on Frontier scripting and use of Runtime.

It's a mailing list that reaches other people who interested in Frontier scripting, many of whom have substantial experience writing scripts. All major releases from UserLand can be retrieved from the Internet service.

For information send email to Frontier.Info@dartmouth.edu.

UserLand Software welcomes this new support service and we encourage Internet users to check it out. As usual, comments, questions and suggestions are welcome!

Late Breaking News...

One of our test sites, Terry Teague, reports that there's another Internet site for Frontier script writers. Terry writes:

"There is an anonymous FTP site on the Internet that holds most of the Frontier stuff. This site is being used by TopSoft (the developers of FilterTop) and the keeper of the FTP site is Fred Terry. It is constantly being updated, and Fred is eager to put Runtime up there as soon as it is released. So... you might want to add to the Internet ReadMe about this anonymous FTP site.

The address is "syrinx.kgs.ukans.edu," and Fred Terry's address is "pfterry@MSMail.kgs.ukans.edu."
