The open movie is saved under the new name and the original movie on disk is unchanged.

If you choose Save Normally, the new file retains any dependencies that existed in the original file.

If you choose Make Movie Self-Contained, the new file stores the contents of the movie exactly as it plays. Dependencies are eliminated.