

The Japanese archipelago was formed millions of years ago by volcanic eruptions from the earth's surface. Today, Japan has about 200 volcanoes, which create a rugged landscape.