

NamedFolder7

NamedFolder7 is a system 7 version of the old NamedFolder for system 6. It is an extension that makes creating folders in the Finder a little bit simpler and more natural.

Typically, when you create a new folder in the Finder either by using the Command N keystroke or the New Folder menu item, a folder with the name untitled folder appears in the Finder window. Then you must rename the folder and then the folders are reordered alphabetically - if the current view is 'by name.'

When using NamedFolder7, choosing New Folder (or pressing Command N) in the Finder will bring up a dialog box in which the name of the folder can be inserted. After pressing return, a folder with that name is created in the current Finder directory and appears in the appropriate window in the proper alphabetic position.

NamedFolder7 is copyright 1994 by David P. Sumner and is FreeWare. It is not, however, public domain. The author retains all rights to the software. Comments and/or suggestions are most welcome.

Mail comments and/or suggestions to: (the Internet address is preferred)

Internet: sumner@math.scarolina.edu

America Online: David Sumn

Compuserve: 75515,1507

This software comes without warranty or guarantee of any kind. There is no promise of technical support. The author disclaims any liability of any kind for any damages whatsoever resulting from the use of this software. This includes, without limitation, incidental, consequential, indirect, or special damages of any kind. The author makes no warranties expressed or implied with respect to this software, including but not limited to warranties of merchantability or fitness for a particular purpose.