Setting Up:

First, open the PopAddress control panel (if it has been properly installed, you'll find it in the Control Panels folder in the System Folder).

To use the PopAddress Popup menu you must click the "Popup" check box or the "Keys" box to the right of the "Popup" check box to define which key(s) (option, command, control, shift or any combination of these keys) will bring up the PopAddress pop-up menu when you click and hold down the mouse button. Turn the PopAddress Popup menu off by unchecking all four check boxes.

You can set any key(s) to access the four different PopAddress options from the PopAddress control panel (see "The PopAddress Window" below for more information on changing the settings).

NOTE: You should not use key combinations that are used by most applications such as Command-N, Command-O, Command-S, etc. (these are usually the commands for New, Open and save in most applications).
