

Technical support and feedback

To get help with using MindControl or to send us feedback, please visit MindVision Tools Support online at <http://www.mindvision.com/consumer/support/support.asp>.

If you have questions about MindControl, this is the place for answers. You'll find responses to frequently asked questions, online documentation and a form for requesting technical support.

You can also let us know if you want a certain feature that MindControl doesn't provide. Or maybe you found a bug. Your requests go straight into the same database that our development team uses, and we will read and consider every request and bug report that comes in.

To learn how to get the most from MindControl, visit the MindControl Extras site at <http://www.mindvision.com/mindcontrol/extras>. Here you can find out how other people are putting MindControl to use. Along with reading helpful tips, you can download AppleScripts that make MindControl even more useful. For example, one script will create a MindControl command for the web page currently displayed by your web browser. Another script will read the sender's address from an e-mail message and create a MindControl command for that address.

If you come up with a novel use for MindControl, we invite you to share it with others. This could be a tip for using MindControl, or it could be an executable AppleScript. Just go to the MindControl Extras site and submit your information. We will review all submissions and post the approved ones on the web site where everyone can access them.

For all the latest information on MindControl, visit the MindVision Tools web site at <http://www.mindvision.com/mindcontrol>.