A stack intended to help with Bible Study and faith.

GES-61: HyperSword
A Bible study and trivia stack.

7. Authoring

Authoring programs are for you to create your own interactive fiction. Some of these could be used by students but most are too difficult without extensive computing experience or help. Programs included develop interactive fiction, wordless stories, journal, poetry and newsletter writers and much more.

IFA-1. Adventures+*

Adventures +, Solo Adventure, and HyperQuest. Adventures+ contains some sample games but is intended to be used to create and distribute your own games. The other two are stacks intended to help create your own stacks adventure games.

IFA-2. Adventure Games ToolKit*

A very complicated adventure games authoring program. This creates great all prose adventures, but is more complicated to learn to use, probably for teachers or advanced students. Extensive documentation comes on the disk and more is available.

IFA-3. Wordless Stories & Animation

Includes a wordless stories "Your Faithful Camel" and "Inigo Gets Out", as well as two stacks which help create similar stacks. The animation is the very basic, flipcard type. The stories included are interactive and wordless, but words could easily be added.

IFA-4. TADS*

Another system for composing interactive fictions stories. The idea is similar to adventure Games ToolKit but it doesn't appear to be as complicated. This includes Ditch Day Drifter, a game which doesn't revolve around swords and sorcery!

IFA-5. Misc Authoring Tools

Various writing and story creating stacks and programs including Journal Writer, Golden Parrot, Shakespeare, Story Maker 2, and StoryCard.

IFA-6. Non-Fiction Authoring Tools*

Includes Newsflash, for writing HyperCard newsletters, DocMaker, the shareware program with which this catalogue is written and BookBinder, a stack for writing non-fiction interactive text such as Whales, etc.

IFA-7. The ACK Disk*

Includes the Adventure Construction Kit, a complex stack for creating interactive text adventures.
