

AOA U.S. OSTEOPATHIC LICENSURE SUMMARY

August 2005

HOW TO USE THIS SUMMARY

Introduction

The Osteopathic Licensing Summary contains relevant information about the licensing requirements in each state. DOs who graduated more than 25 years ago, with fewer “standardized” credentials, may be subject to different standards of eligibility for licensure. Their questions should be addressed to the specific licensing board involved.

Generally, a license can be obtained in one of three ways:

- (1) Examination administered by the board. It may prepare its own examination or administer an examination that has been prepared and purchased from a specialized agency. Today, the United States Medical Licensing Examination (USMLE) and the Comprehensive Osteopathic Medical Licensing Examination (COMLEX-USA) are the most widely used tests.
- (2) In lieu of examination, acceptance of the certificate issued by the NBOME, awarded only after an applicant has satisfied the requirements, including the successful passage of a rigorous series of tests.
- (3) Reciprocity or endorsement of a license previously received from another state. No applicant is ever entitled to automatic reciprocity, for all licensing boards reserve the right to exercise discretion individually in evaluating an applicant's personal, professional, and moral qualifications. Also, the license presented for reciprocity or endorsement must usually have been issued on the basis of a written examination. Many licensing boards are not specific about the states with which they would reciprocate; while we have attempted to list as much reciprocity information as we have, DOs having a question about the eligibility of a particular state's license should address it to the specific board, giving details. At one time a majority of states had basic science requirements and administered a written examination. This explains why certain boards will reciprocate with certificates once issued by states that have now abolished their basic science law.

Preprofessional education requirements are not described, although they are retained in many licensing statutes. Some statutes even continue to specify the extent of a high school education that an applicant must have. The admissions requirements of all accredited osteopathic colleges serve to insure that virtually all recipients of the DO degree now have a minimum of three years in college, and most have a BA or BS degree.

Fees have been given where information was available, but since fees change more frequently than any other requirement, users should expect to find occasional changes, and should, of course, rely on the latest information supplied by a particular board.

Meaning of terms

Scope of practice - Many states do not adequately define the scope of a physician's practice rights in their licensing statute, be he/she a DO or an MD. Depending on the state, a DO may receive a license to practice “medicine and surgery,” “osteopathic medicine and surgery,” “osteopathy and surgery,” or “osteopathy,” and all may convey the same rights. For brevity, the AOA uses the term “unlimited” practice rights, which for practical purposes, means the treatment of human ailments, etc., by any and all methods; and can be comparably described as the same rights received by MDs. If the scope of practice is not listed under an individual state's requirements, it is “unlimited.”

Educational requirements - As previously indicated, this heading is usually limited to summarizing the state's definition of an approved osteopathic college. As a practical matter, graduation from an AOA accredited college should satisfy the professional educational requirements of all states.

Postgraduate training - This section details the number of years and the type of programs that will satisfy the postgraduate training requirement. Most states require one year of postgraduate training; Alaska, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Kentucky, Illinois, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island, South Dakota, and Utah are exceptions.

Board - This term refers to the licensing board empowered to recommend or actually issue osteopathic licenses. There are basically three types of boards: (1) DO - composed entirely of osteopathic physicians and has the responsibility of granting unlimited licenses to DOs; (2) MD - composed entirely of MDs but having responsibility for granting unlimited licenses to both DOs and MDs; (3) Composite - composed of DOs and MDs in varying ratios, but usually with a majority of MDs, and has the responsibility of granting unlimited licenses to DOs and MDs. In addition to the physicians who sit on state licensing boards, public members are now included on the board, regardless of the board composition.

Board address - This section lists the official name, contact person, address and phone number for each state's licensing board.

Osteopathic members - Those DOs who sit on the state licensing boards are included in this section.

Sunset laws - Many states include "sunset" provisions when enacting licensing boards. In such cases, the authority of the board expires, or "sunssets," on a given date unless specifically reauthorized by the legislature.

Examinations accepted - This section lists the examinations accepted by state licensing boards. Currently, the two national examinations recognized by state licensing boards are the COMLEX-USA and the USMLE. Both the COMLEX exam and the USMLE are three-part national examinations consisting of both written examinations and clinical skills examinations. COMLEX Level 1 or USMLE Step 1 is usually taken during the second year of medical school; COMLEX Level 2, both the written portion and the Performance Evaluation, or USMLE Step 2 is usually taken in the fourth year of medical school; and COMLEX Level 3 or USMLE Step 3 can be taken during the first year of postgraduate training. So when it states that an examination, i.e., COMLEX, USMLE, etc., is recognized, it means all the Parts or Steps must be successfully passed.

The National Board of Osteopathic Medical Examiners (NBOME) develops and administers a complete and comprehensive examination program for DOs -- the Comprehensive Osteopathic Medical Licensing Examination (COMLEX). The COMLEX replaced the NBOME exam. The United States Medical Licensing Examination (USMLE) is the one, single medical licensing examination for allopathic physicians and replaced the Federation Licensing Examination (FLEX) and the National Board Medical Examination (NBME).

License fee - This area contains the cost for securing an unlimited license. Fees change more frequently than any other requirement, so be sure to check with the specific licensing board for exact amounts.

Federation Credentials Verification Service (FCVS) - The Federation of State Medical Boards (FSMB) created the FCVS to verify a physician's core credentials -- identity, medical education and training, and examination history. While a majority of states will accept the FCVS, there are some states that will not accept the FCVS. These states that will not accept the FCVS require direct source verification for physician licensure.

Reciprocity or Endorsement - See the appropriate paragraph in the Introduction.

Special licenses - This section lists information about availability of temporary permits granting practice privileges pending the issuance of unlimited license.

Reregistration - States require periodical reregistration. Dates and fees are given when known.

CME requirement - A number of states also require continuing medical education (CME) as a condition of reregistering licenses.

Malpractice insurance - Information regarding the state requirements for and availability of malpractice insurance coverage has been provided by some states. For information about specific insurance carriers, contact the divisional osteopathic society in the appropriate state.

Those interested in additional information about states' licensing requirements may contact the individual licensing boards or AOA's Associate Director for State Government Relations, 142 East Ontario, Chicago IL 60611, 1-800-621-1773 ext. 8184 or (312) 202-8184.

NATIONAL BOARD OF OSTEOPATHIC MEDICAL EXAMINERS, INC

The National Board of Osteopathic Medical Examiners (NBOME) is incorporated under the laws of the state of Indiana. It consists of not more than 25 members at-large from the osteopathic profession. Members must be osteopathic physicians in good standing of the American Osteopathic Association, educators/clinicians of recognized prominence and shall have been licensed to practice as an osteopathic physician for at least five years prior to appointment.

Board members are nominated by the directors of the National Board of Osteopathic Medical Examiners, approved by the Board of Trustees of the American Osteopathic Association, and elected by the National Board of Osteopathic Medical Examiners, to serve for a period of three years.

The officers of the Board consist of a President/CEO, Chief Operations Officer, Vice President of Testing & Research and Secretary-Treasurer, selected from and elected by the membership of the Board at each Spring session, and serve until their successors are qualified and elected.

The Board has established an advisory panel or test committee of content experts for each examination. These experts must be duly nominated by a member and approved by the Board. They are appointed annually to serve under the direction of the respective test construction committee chairman.

Regulations and requirements

The examination given is divided into three levels. With the exception of Level 2 – PE, all parts of the exam are computer-based.

COMLEX Level 1 is a two-day, written, multiple-choice examination covering the basic medical sciences of anatomy, behavioral science, biochemistry, microbiology, osteopathic principles, pathology, pharmacology, physiology and other areas relevant to medical problems. The examination consists of four test books, each given in a four-hour test session, containing questions related to all clinical presentations and disciplines.

COMLEX Level 2 consists of two-parts: the Cognitive Evaluation and the Performance Evaluation:

The Cognitive Evaluation (CE) is a written section is a series of multiple choice questions used singly or in case scenarios from the following disciplines: internal medicine, surgery, pediatrics, psychiatry, community medicine/medical humanities, and osteopathic principles. The examination consists of four test books, each given in a four-hour test session; each book contains items relating to all disciplines.

The Performance Evaluation (PE) consists of 12 simulated clinical encounters with standardized patients, primarily modeled on visits to outpatient primary care settings. The clinical encounters last 14 minutes, allowing the candidate to evaluate and treat the patient according to the patient's presenting complaint. After each encounter, the candidate completes a written SOAP note.

COMLEX Level 3 is a two-day, written examination consisting of multiple choice questions used singly or in case scenarios from the following encounters: family practice, internal medicine, obstetrics/gynecology, pediatrics, surgery, psychiatry, osteopathic principles and emergency medicine. Emphasis is on testing the information physician's knowledge based on the actual practice patterns of osteopathic primary care physicians. This level of the exam utilizes a proactive wellness approach to patient health care, covering such topics as psychosocial issues relating to patients' environments and lifestyles. Additional items such as cost management, physician impairment and other issues related to the practices of today's health care are incorporated. The examination consists of four test books, each given in a four-hour test session; each book contains items relating to all disciplines.

Eligibility requirements

A candidate may take Level 1 upon satisfactory completion of the first half of the sophomore year in an AOA-approved college of osteopathic medicine and with the approval of the Dean. Both parts of Level 2 may be taken after having passed Level 1 within the NBOME's requirement, and having satisfactorily completed the third year in an AOA-approved osteopathic medical school and with approval of the Dean.

A candidate who has passed Part I/Level 1 and Part II/Level 2, within the requirements of the NBOME, shall be eligible to complete COMLEX Level 3 upon compliance with the following requirements:

1. Graduation from a college of osteopathic medicine approved by the American Osteopathic Association, with the earned DO degree.

2. Must currently be participating in or have completed an AOA Bureau of Professional Education approved internship or ACGME-approved PGY 1.

3. Application must be made on current original form. The signature of the Director of Medical Education or the Program Director is required for Level 3 applications. A notarized copy of the internship certificate or PGY 1 certificate may be submitted in lieu of this requirement.

DATES OF EXAMINATION

The NBOME conducts Levels 1 and 2 of its examinations only twice a year at AOA- approved colleges of osteopathic medicine and/or testing sites arranged by the NBOME. The Level 2-PE exam is only given at the NBOME National Center for Clinical Skills Testing in Pennsylvania. Exam dates are subject to change. Applications may be obtained from the NBOME or the office of the dean of an osteopathic college. Level 1 is given in June and October; Level 2-CE is given in January and August, and the PE is offered daily year round; and Level 3 is given in June and December at NBOME-approved regional testing sites geographically centered to the largest known concentration of interns in each area. Level 3 applications are distributed to osteopathic internship program hospitals where candidates have contracted through the AOA. Applications may also be obtained by contacting the NBOME office. All candidates participating in ACGME approved postgraduate training programs should contact the NBOME directly for a Level 3 application.

The completed application form and check with the current fee must be received in the NBOME office by the established deadlines. All correspondence should be sent to: National Board of Osteopathic Medical Examiners, Inc., 8765 West Higgins Road, Suite 200, Chicago, IL 60631 (773) 714-0622 or you can visit their Website at www.nbome.org.

COMPREHENSIVE OSTEOPATHIC MEDICAL VARIABLE PURPOSE EXAMINATION - USA (COMVEX-USA)

The COMVEX is the newest evaluation instrument offered to osteopathic physicians who need to demonstrate current osteopathic medical knowledge for licensing purposes. As a measurement tool, the COMVEX provides the state medical licensing boards with a clear evaluation of a candidate's knowledge of current osteopathic medical practices.

The COMVEX is available to candidates through the individual state licensing boards. The examination is created under the auspices of the National Board of Osteopathic Medical Examiners by test construction and review committees composed of a variety of osteopathic physicians from a range of medical disciplines.

SPECIAL PURPOSE EXAMINATION (SPEX)

The Federation of State Medical Boards administers the Special Purpose Examination (SPEX). The purpose of SPEX is to reexamine specific physicians for whom a licensing board determines the need for a demonstration of medical knowledge. It is a one-day examination composed of multiple choice questions, which are specially selected to test physicians who are five or more years beyond medical school graduation.
