

competition

This month, the lucky winner will be the proud owner of a Dan dantum 95/133 multimedia system plus a bundle of software. Ten runners-up will be able to indulge themselves browsing and dipping through their copy of the Collins Electronic Dictionary and Thesaurus

A superb multimedia system from Dan Technology awaits this month's lucky competition winner. With plenty of memory, a large hard disk and a speedy CD-ROM drive, this is well worth winning. Ten runners-up will each receive one of our Best Buys—a Collins Electronic Dictionary and Thesaurus.

First prize

Dan is a well-established company producing high-quality computers which regularly perform well in our group tests.

This multimedia dantum 95/133 system is packed with features, and is ideal both for business and the most demanding games software. A Pentium processor, running at 133MHz, 16Mb of EDO RAM and a 1.2Gb hard disk combine to ensure this desktop PC won't look under-powered for a long time. Graphics are taken care of with a 1Mb Windows Accelerator card and shown off well with the 15in microprocessor-controlled low-radiation monitor. Add to that a multimedia kit (Sound Blaster 16, an 8x CD-ROM), speakers and you're well equipped to tackle most things. Software is not forgotten – in addition to Windows 95, you'll get Microsoft Works, Encarta 96 (US) and Serif's PagePlus DTP package.

Runners-up

Up to 10 runners-up will receive the Collins Electronic Dictionary and Thesaurus, version 2.

This newly-released version has a slick interface. You'll find it easy to search for words or, if you can't remember a word, you can look for it via keywords in its definition.

Foreign or unfamiliar words can be tricky to pronounce, but help is available via the International Phonetic Alphabet. This dictionary is a must for all confirmed browsers and dippers.

How to win

Simply answer these questions, and complete the tie-breaker.

1. How much EDO RAM does the dantum 95 have?
2. What speed CD-ROM drive is supplied in the Dan multimedia kit?
3. What system helps you pronounce words correctly?
