

Editorial

by Todd Michael Lewis

Hello and Goodbye

All of you who are paying attention out there know that I took over the reigns of Softdisk for Windows just last month. Well, sad to say, but this is my last month. A mere two months in the spotlight, and I'm gone. Have I left, been fired, burned out? No, no and no! Quite simply, I took over as a stop-gap measure while we waited for our new man. Who will he be? Why, it's Matthew Hudson whom faithful subscribers may remember from his many quality programs on both our DOS and Windows issues. Somehow we managed to cajole him down South to the hallowed halls of Softdisk. I'm sure he'll do a great job so let's give him a good welcome.

Demo

This month our demo is not a demo at all: it's the full-fledged software for Prodigy Internet. Many people have enjoyed custom content on Prodigy's online service for years. They have extended this service to include internet usage. Prodigy Internet makes the perfect solution for novice internet users. By providing easy setup and great content, they enrich your internet experience.

Because of the size and complexity of Prodigy Internet's install, you will be unable to run it from the shell. You must use the install button to fully install the product and then run it from Program Manager or Windows Explorer.

Letters, we get letters...

This last month we got a lot of feedback from everyone out there, and we appreciate it. Check out the Comic's Corner and Mailbag to see the thoughts and contributions of fellow subscribers. Keep 'em coming!

Todd Michael Lewis
Issue Manager
Softdisk for Windows