Wallpapers
(That great desktop look without all that messy wallpaper paste.)

On this Issue
We present a set of great computer-rendered tiles from our resident artist, Tom Carter (who, by the way, has been responsible for all of our great title screen graphics). These 10 tileable wallpapers and full screen (640x480) wallpaper are all in 256 colors. Plus on the CD we also include the wallpapers in true-color (16 million color) versions (for a grand total of 22 images!).

Press the How to Use button for more information on how to install and use these wallpapers and the Manager button to view them or delete them.

The Tiles:
by Tom Carter

We've run out of creative names for all of our textured wallpapers. In our new format, each wallpaper has a number, and below is a brief description of the wallpaper. In the future, we are going to publish a wallpaper manager that can keep track of your wallpapers based on those numbers. They are named in this way:

      XXXX_CCC.BMP

Where XXXX is the four digit number and CCC is "256" or "hi" for 256 or true-color respectively.

Here are the tiles on this issue:

0100	Stars
0101	Big Mess
0102	Icing
0103	Cells
0104	Hemoglobin
0105	Needlepoint
0106	Scottsman
0107	Psycho Wood
0108	Warped Wood
0109	Techno Doily

The Full Screen Wallpater - Apocolyptic Mosquitos
by Tom Carter

Giant mosquitos fly over some serene landscape of the future, a future where no bug spray can help against these massive, insect-shaped ships. Don't let the small size in the shell's viewer fool you; this image is really a 640x480 full-screen image.
