

One still image in a movie. Movies containing motion video and animation are made up of a series of frames, played in succession.