#34   Copying and pasting menus

Written by Ron Dell'Aquila   Published Date December 14, 1987
_____

Copying and pasting menus within the design environment
_____

When working with the Menu editor, it is sometimes necessary to create duplicate menu bars. 4th Dimension fully supports the Macintosh Cut and Paste functions when using the menu editor.

By selecting the desired menu, then copying it to the clipboard, it is possible to reconstruct a copy of the existing menu by merely pasting the contents of the clipboard to a location in the new menu.

By bank switching menu bars, it is possible to enable or disable many unrelated menu items at once. Switching menu bars is much faster and more efficient then enabling or disabling many individual menu items.

4th Dimension Technical Note