

Your Macintosh's internal clock tends to drift over time, which can be a minor irritation if you use it to keep time. Net Chronometer will prove useful then since it will synchronise your clock to a highly accurate time-server over the Internet.