

Service Source 2.0 Arriving in February 1996

November 1995 Service Notices

Overview

As the result of a year-long effort based on your input and feedback, beginning February 1996, Apple will ship Service Source CD 2.0 and post Service Source 2.0 online. As part of our goal to provide you with a more effective service business tool, all current subscribers of the Service Source CD (including AASP+ bundle customers) will automatically receive this enhanced subscription.

New Features

New features of the Service Source 2.0 include

- An Adobe™ Acrobat™ platform for enhanced navigation and customization
- A more powerful search engine for faster, more accurate information retrieval
- Online (Internet) access for the latest Service Source information
- Service Notices posted online and on the CD, instead of paper
- Improved content, including the addition of the Tech Info Library (TIL), detailed product basics, and much more

System Requirements

To utilize these requested enhancements, you will need 8 MB of RAM; the other minimum hardware and software requirements will not change. For a list of current system requirements, refer to this CD (Path: Service Information, Programs, Standard information).

No January Mailing

There will not be a January Service Notice mailing or update to Service Source CD, due to the low number of new product introductions.
