

Text Miscellaneous Contracts

This is the collection of text contracts that just don't fit into any of the other text contract categories.

The only contracts in this category are all based on a code snippet we found that displays text in a text element one character at a time. This effect has been wrapped in a couple of different contracts that start the process of spilling out text via different events. For example you might want the text to start spilling out when the page loads, or when the user clicks something.

These contracts only work in IE 4.0 and above.