

Welcome to our 100th issue - a bigger, better, more exciting PC Advisor

Maybe you think there's nothing more you can learn about your computer. But at PC Advisor we believe there's plenty more knowledge to impart. We want to help you get the most from the technology you already have, as well as showing you some of the great new products you can buy.

So we've taken the opportunity afforded by our 100th issue to introduce some changes - not just in appearance, but changes that make PC Advisor even better value for our readers. And I don't just mean the new price...

Expert advice you can trust

First, there's the Advisors, a new panel of experts in 10 key areas of computer technology. The Advisors will write about what's new, what's useful and what's problematic in their sphere of expertise in a pragmatic series of columns. Consider the Advisors your monthly consultants: if you've got an issue that you think they can help with, simply email them. See pages 143-163 for details.

We've packed a lot more reviews into this issue, something that we will continue to do month after month. We aim to give you the lowdown on a greater range of the latest hardware and software products and what they are like to use.

We've increased the number of feature articles, improved their layout so they are easier to read and introduced new sections to the magazine so you can quickly find the information you are looking for.

But we've also kept the things you like most: Helpline, answering your everyday PC queries; workshops that help you get more from your PC; and Readers' writes, where you have your say.

In fact, there's a lot more of everything in this issue - over 180 pages of editorial. And this isn't just a one-off, we've committed to providing extra editorial every month. And, yes, PC Advisor will still be the same price next month.

We've taken the opportunity afforded by our 100th issue to introduce some changes - not just in appearance, but changes that make PC Advisor even better value for our readers. And I don't just mean the new price...
