cover disc: DVD

Our exclusive DVD film boldly goes to the far reaches of Earth as we follow in the footsteps of intrepid explorer Ernest Shackleton. Along with his crew, the Irish-born adventurer battled to beat rival Robert Scott to the South Pole. Our first documentary draws upon a wealth of historical knowledge and investigates the social setting and psychology of these men who dramatically, and fatally, pushed the limits of human endurance.

The second film retraces Shackleton's journey to rescue his men, marooned on Elephant Island after disaster struck their trip across Antarctica. The task was no mean feat – heroics that almost saw the death of the men involved.

This video presents the extreme and deadly nature of polar exploration, and ← ...a journey retraced in 1997, though this time with slightly better equipment gives an insight into the psychology of adventurers who tackle the far reaches of the planet and themselves. ■
