

← Beng Q150

LCD TV

If you live in a small flat or you're looking for a second TV for a bedroom, what could be better than a sleek 15in LCD screen? The Q150 has a built-in stereo, an ultra-modern design and a bright display yet its overall footprint means it takes up very little space. Available in the UK from June.

■ www.benq.co.uk ■ Price: TBA

← Olympus C-750 UZ

Digital camera

Olympus borrowed from its beautifully designed Mju range of film cameras for its latest top-notch digital model. The C-750 UZ boasts a 4Mp (megapixel) resolution, 10x optical zoom, 4x digital zoom, the ability to shoot 12 frames at 2.6fps (frames per second) and a host of features that will delight any amateur photographer.

www.olympus.co.uk £425 ex VAT

← Samsung X10

Wireless notebook

At a little over 1in thick, Samsung's latest notebook is its slimmest yet. However, the X10 is still packed with features including Intel's Centrino mobile processor and a wireless network chipset. The slimline Samsung weighs 1.8kg and battery life is claimed to be up to 4.5 hours, recharging in two hours while in use.

www.samsungelectronics.co.uk

■ from £1,399 ex VAT

→ Asus L5C

Notebook

Asus' L5C portable comes with a 15in 1,600x1,200 resolution screen that boasts a 170-degree viewing angle. Its IPS (in-plane switching) technology promises better colour range, higher contrast ratio, increased brightness and better response time so there's no blur. The L5C is powered by Intel's P4 chip running at 3.06GHz – a desktop processor – and has plenty of memory.

■ www.asus.com.tw ■ Price: TBA

→ Veo 660V & 630V Photo Traveller

Digital cameras for PDAs

A Veo unit can turn your PDA into a mini digital camera. The tiny 660V Photo Traveller fits into the Secure Digital slot on Palm handhelds, while the 630V uses the CompactFlash slot on Pocket PC PDAs. Both capture 24bit colour Jpegs at 640x480 resolution. Features include automatic exposure, white balance, colour control and a manual focus ring with a swivel lens.

■ www.veo.com ■ £66 ex VAT

→ HP iPaq h1915

Pocket PC

The latest edition to HP's iPaq range is the h1915. It looks gorgeous and is smaller and lighter than a Palm V, but it doesn't add a great deal more than its competitors, or even previous iPaqs, in terms of functionality. HP is sticking with the Pocket PC operating system and apps on a full-colour screen, powered by Intel's 200MHz PXA250 processor. There's 64MB of SDRAM supplemented by a Secure Digital memory card slot.

■ www.hp.co.uk ■ Price: TBA

