

To open an existing Image Integrator Library, select Open Image Library... from the Utilities menu. A dialog appears, prompting the user to select an Image Integrator library to open. When a library is selected, click the OK button. The palette appears, displaying the contents of the chosen Image Integrator library in text list form. Image Integrator allows the user to open up to seven palettes at the same time so that the user may view multiple Image Integrator libraries at once. Another way of opening an existing Image Integrator Library is opening it in the Finder (System 7 only). This is done by either Double-Clicking on the Image Library's Icon or Dragging the Image Library's Icon into QuarkXPress' Icon. (For all you Power User's - Image Integrator adds an Apple Event Handler to QuarkXPress to allow it to accept an Open Document Event from the Finder for Image Integrator Libraries.)