AN INTERVIEW WITH A PIONEER

Wolly had the pleasure of interviewing Jim Button of ButtonWare recently via E-mail. Jim goes back to the birth of the shareware concept with PC File, and Bob Gollihur reviews the Windows descendant in this issue, buttonFile.

Were you one of the 'pioneers' of the shareware concept?

JB: I co-pioneered the shareware concept with the late Andrew Fluegelman. No one knows which of us sent out the first shareware disk. We both started doing shareware at about the same time. For several months, after finding out about each other, we collaborated.

When did you start and how did you get into it?

JB: Summer of 1982. I put a message on my disk asking for a payment if recipients wanted to be notified about updates. The idea was to recover some of my operating costs. The earliest disks went first to my work associates in IBM and other friends in the Seattle area. Later, with their encouragement, I expanded my mailings to computer clubs in Boston, Dallas and elsewhere.

What was your first product and how did it do?

JB: The first product was PC-File. It's still doing well. The first half-year sales were $30,000. The next (full year) sales were $300,000. Since then, PC-File has always grossed in excess of $1 million per year - with many years in excess of $2 million.

How do you compare buttonFile to the original PC File?

JB: The look and feel are decidedly different, due to the Windows interface in buttonFile. The concepts are the same: A very simple to use filing program - made simple by good user interface design and a lack of exotic features. Still, enough function to handle 80 to 90 percent of what the average person would ever need to do with a database program.

What other products to do offer?

JB: Right now, only PC-File and buttonFile.

What others do you have in development that you can talk about?

JB: I can't talk about it. <grin>

How does it feel to be considered one of the 'fathers of shareware'?

JB: It's a great honor. Makes me feel kinda old and statesmanly. It's also pleasing to realize that shareware has done so much for both authors and users.

Wolly most enjoyed this comment best:

JB: When I first told my wife about my shareware idea, she remarked "You're a foolish man if you think that anyone will voluntarily send you even a penny." She wishes she had never said that!

Wolly enjoyed his talk with Jim Button and hopes you will read Bob's review of his latest program.

SHAREWARE BRIEFS

DINO SLOTS

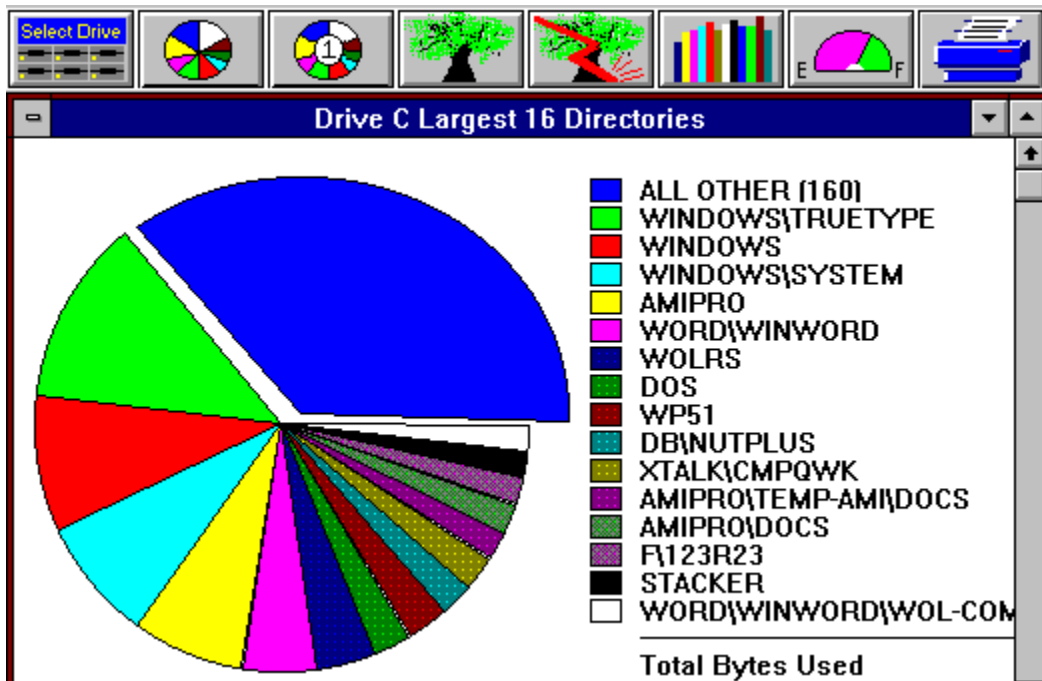

Won't find any of these in Atlantic City

This creative and amusing twist to the traditional slot machine brought a much needed smile to Wolly's visage this week. Drop a rock into the slot, pull the club and watch the prehistoric creatures revolve, complete with sound effects to accompany your action and win or loss. A clever and intelligent "Dino Quiz" is included as a side game, which will add or subtract rocks from your stash depending on your answer accuracy. Hats off for creativity to Brett and Laura McDonald who ask $13.95 to register DS101.ZIP (129K).

DISK AT A GLANCE

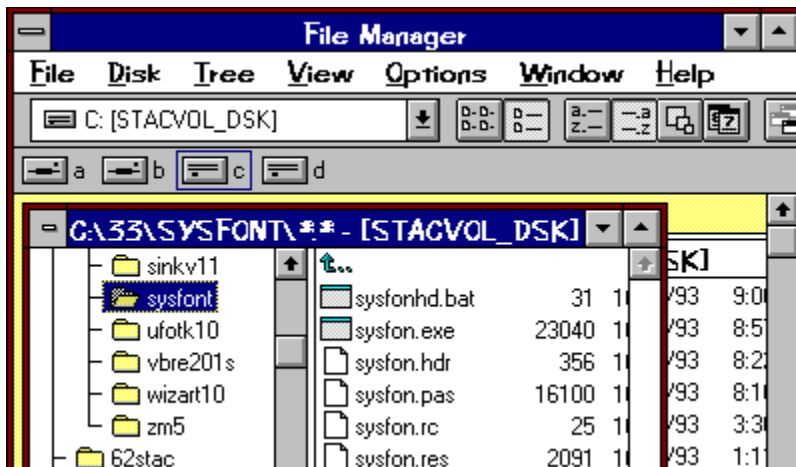

I'm lookin'

Wolly's seen his share of disk mapping shareware, but especially likes this new entry from Steve Leonard. Disk at a Glance is a MDI program, with multiple pieces of information that can be accessed and then displayed simultaneously from the convenient pushbuttons. Display a pie chart featuring your sixteen largest directories, individually or cumulative. View a tree map of your selected drive, and print hard copy of any report or graphic. DAGW.ZIP (76K) can also graphically display free space on your drives. Registration is a mere $6.00, which will enable the bar graph feature not included in the shareware version. BWCC.DLL, a Borland dynamic link library required to run the program, is not included. If you don't already have it on your drive from some prior program install, it is available from Windows OnLine as BWCC103.ZIP (50K).

SYSFON

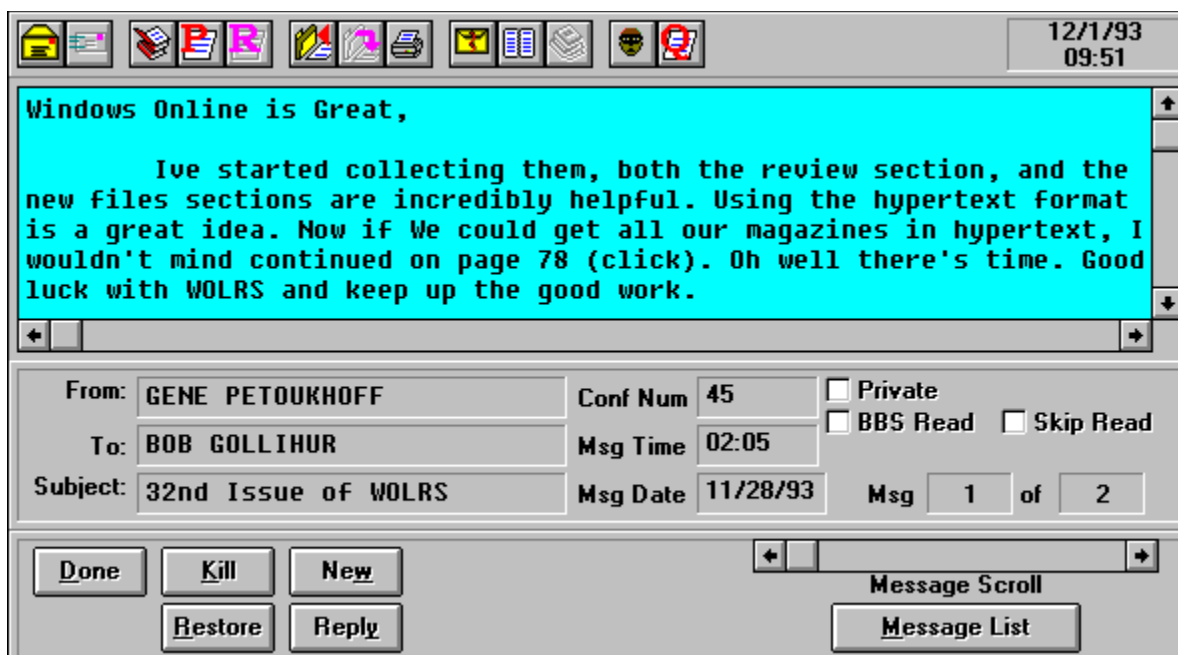

A different look

Want a different look for your desktop? Sysfon strikes a blow for individuality by creating FON files from any existing Windows screen font (bitmap, TrueType, ATM, etc.). At your command it will install it as your system font by modifying your SYSTEM.INI file. This means all your titles and menus will use the new font you've created. SYSFONT.ZIP (21K) is freeware from author Peter Karrer and includes the source code.

VBREADER

New features to read about

It's quite obvious Dan Page has spent quite a bit of time upgrading his off-line mail reader. Version 2.01 sports a number of new features including a button bar, Internet capabilities, bookmarks, packet renaming, improved tag line management and thievery, and much more. The message folder system is especially slick, and you should probably take a look at VbReader to check it out. It uses the Access Database format. Those familiar with earlier versions (Wolly still uses version 1.2 on occasion) will experience a familiar look and feel with many more goodies to choose from. VbReader displays its forethought by automatically moving pointer files to your upload directory, and provides enhanced door configuration functions for adding and dropping conferences. ROT13 encoding and decoding of messages is supported, and passwords for private messages may be used. Finally, an address book to send mail simultaneously with automated addressing to many users, in many conferences, in many BBS systems at once is a useful feature supported in this version. Mail readers are a matter of personal preferences, but adapting to VbReader is easy. VBRE201S.ZIP (900K) is definitely a contender with version 2.01, and there are many more features than Wolly could reasonably list. Registration is a reasonable $25.00, which includes all future versions with no further upgrade charges. Though seduced by some of the newer reader entries, Wolly still has a warm spot in his heart for VbReader.

TRUE TYPE FONTS

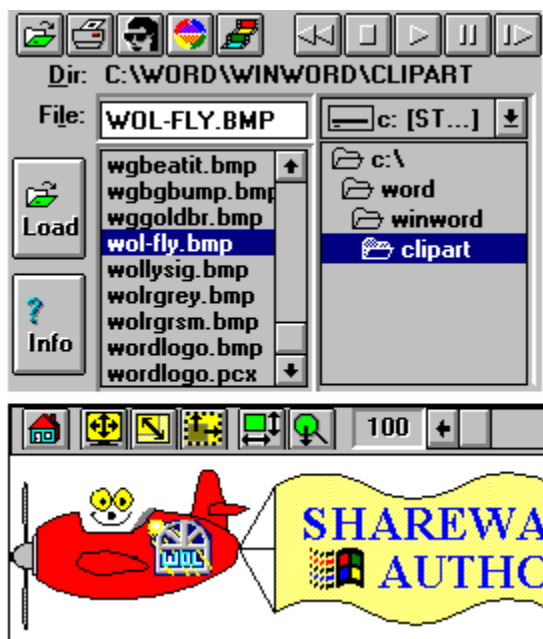

Single submission

SANSKRIT SANSKRIT.ZIP (60K)

(Romanized version- also includes a Word Perfect for Windows keyboard layout)

PREVUE

Graphics galore

Prevue handles a large variety of graphic files as well as some multimedia types. It supports AVI, DCX, EPS, FLI, FLC, MID, AVI, DCX, FLC and WAV files in a load only mode, but can load and save in BMP, DIB, GIF, JIF, JPG, PCX, PCT, TGA, TIF and WPG formats. It does the usual tricks of flipping, dithering, grey scaling, sizing, color and fine tuning, etc., very nicely and does video tricks, too. Give PREVUE11.ZIP (628K) an audition if you're into graphics play. Registration is $35.00.

SINKSUB

I'll try!

This harkens back to Wolly's sordid youth, when video games did not require three arms, a Ph.D., or pre-teen tenacity. SinkSub is reminiscent, if not nearly an exact copy, of a wonderful arcade game of that pre-Nintendo time. You get to be the ship, and the nasty old submarines send floating bombs your way while you send depth charges in their direction. Try to avoid being hit and try to hit them first. Refreshing simplicity in a world where operating a voice mail system becomes more of a challenge every day. The SINKV11.ZIP (350K) graphics are good and the sound effects just right. Registration is $10.00. Try it. It made Wolly somewhat nostalgic.

EYE ON SUNRISE

Wolly prefers to avoid it if possible

26	27	28	29	30	31		Reported Time Zone - UTC +	7 MST/PDT

This is a curious combination of systems. As you can see from the partial illustration, Eye on Sunrise will provide times so you can watch your sunrise and sunset, likewise the moon's condition. Click on the calendar for that set of facts for any date, and set the location to any of the many available from the program or set your own. Jump to a full screen world map with the time zones and current times in each, or a weather forecaster or wind chill/heat index calculator. EOSUN.ZIP (319K) is sort of interesting, and can be registered for $20.00.

WAVE RIDER

Splash!! glug -glug -glug

Wolly was pretty disappointed with the presentation of Wave Rider, the long awaited successor to the popular WinQwk mail reader from Doug Crocker. Perhaps it was expectations, maybe it's just lack of polish. Wave Rider comes jumbled with buried zips for no apparent reason and DLLs scattered to the far corners of the file. You have to read through three separate text files to be told which files to move to your \SYSTEM subdirectory. Wolly felt like a beta tester. There's something wrong when a $50.00 shareware program with no semblance of an install program. Option setups are no pleasure, either, with no defaults entered nor convenient browse facilities offered in lesser programs. The program itself is an MDI application and presents a nice face and convenient icon bar to access most mail activities, and multiple BlueWave and QWK packets can be open at the same time, a which is great feature. Wolly felt it a bit sluggish while reading through packets; it seemed to hit a "wall" every once in a while within a conference and delay the move to the next message while it thought about it. Wave Rider does possess most every bell and whistle that a off-line mail reader should, but it was not all that easy to get to know even some of the more routine functions. How do you save a reply? (Don't write and tell Wolly, he knows). How do I cancel one in process? (That you can tell me). Wave Rider may look good to the beta tester brigade who have been with it since the beginning, but to this first time user, it was not approachable in too many elementary ways to make me want to look deeper into its other treasures. WRTOTAL.ZIP (708K) is also available with its contents separated as WR10A.ZIP (409K) and WR10B.ZIP (297K). Registration for WinQwk owners is a discounted $15.00. Wolly really wanted to like Wave Rider, but it was simply not ready for his prime time. Perhaps in a later version.

U.F.O. TRACKER

Right off target!

This arcade game has two things going for it: a relatively attractive graphic for Wolly to show and a $5.77 shareware price. That aside, it bored Wolly senseless. U.F.O. Tracker consists of a static screen image with a single target image appearing at the same few locations ad nauseam. While using Wolly's 386-DX25 the WAV sound effect files caused game interruptions each time you fired. Registration for UFOTK10.ZIP (276K) will enable the speed setting, which may be worth it to get it over more quickly. The marketing description in the accompanying catalog was far more creative than the game itself.

as told to Bob Gollihur

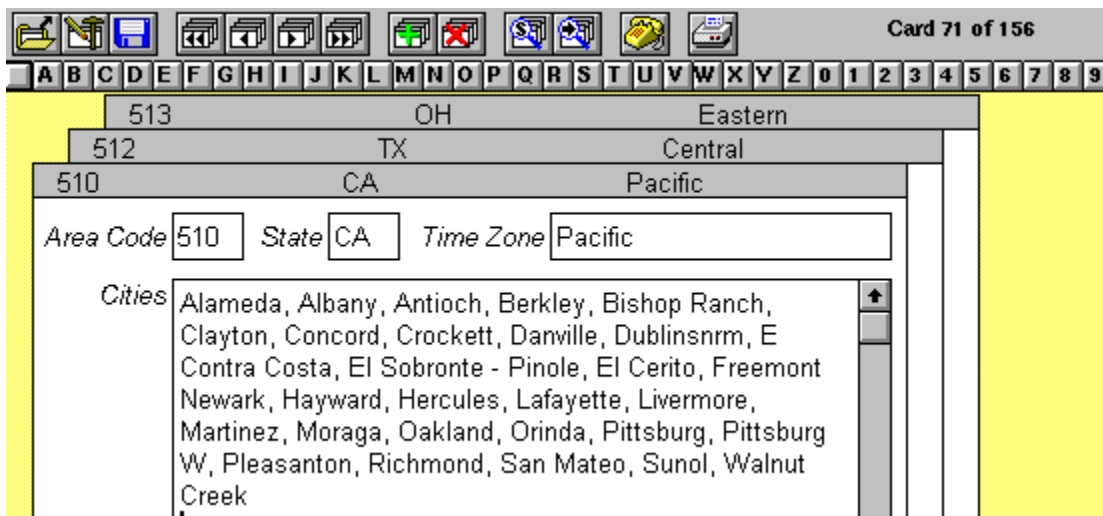

BUTTONFILE

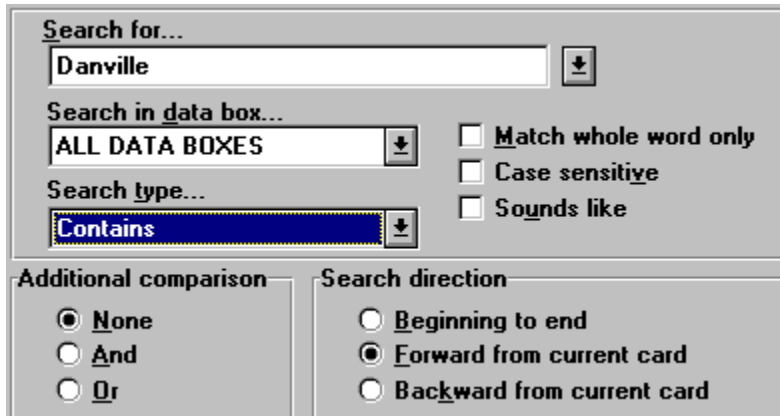

PC File from Jim Button has been a faithful standby in the world of shareware databases for many years. buttonFile is his entry into the world of Windows, essentially a PC File for Windows.

The key to buttonFile is its simplicity: it is not unapproachable or inaccessible to the user not conversant with databases. It has the look and feel of a paper-based system much like cardfile. To further acclimate the uninitiated, it has over a dozen pre-designed templates that can be used as is or easily modified.

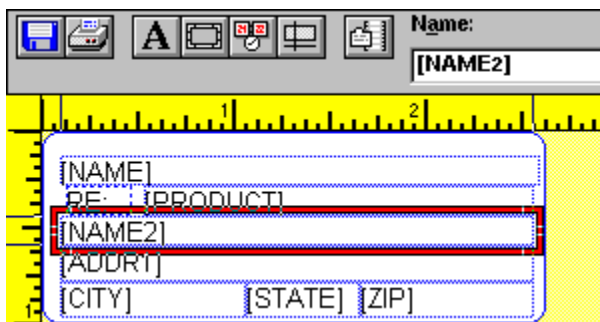

Records may be viewed in their card form or presented in a table format, where column divisors can be easily resized to accommodate your display requirements. The program is an MDI (multiple document interface) application, which allows main and child windows to share your workspace.

buttonFile has a clear search features to narrow your view; this same function is available to restrict your record selections when printing reports or labels. Two criteria may be connected using "and" or "or," and the search specifications include contains, begins with, does not begin with, does not contain, less than, etc. As you can see, buttonFile approaches its tasks with a more common English interface. A "sounds like" search tool is even available.

Designing new databases and reports is pretty easy, in both cases a largely intuitive operation that allows dragging components to size and placement desired. Fields may be individual, resizable boxes, or a scrolling "notes box" (only one per card) containing up to 8192 characters. Button bars abound in each screen, making functions more accessible. Database orders (indexes) are quickly and easily altered, with up the three sort criteria, individually ascending or descending.

Custom reports and forms are a strong point within buttonFile. There are thirty pre-defined cards and envelopes, over fifty laser and pinfeed label formats, and five report page sizes. Fields for report headings, page numbers and system date/time can be added to any report.

There are some other handy features from buttonFile. A multiselection editing tool allows selection of multiple boxes of data using a simple mouse action, where the information can be copied, cut or pasted for several uses. A field may be defined as a phone number that can be autodialed using the built-in facility. Import and export of a variety of file formats is not only available but very flexible.

Unfortunately, buttonFile offers no mathematical ability whatsoever, where that lack of even the simplest computational or summation abilities removes it from consideration for some functions. However, there is no doubt that this friendly and capable program could have multiple applications for many users. My initial impression was not as favorable as my further experience with the program. The more I worked with buttonFile the more I began to appreciate its functionality and ability to address many basic database needs.

Registration for buttonFile is $69.90, for which you will receive a commercial package with an excellent manual. The program is also available from computer retailers. While it lists for $89.95, the street price is below the shareware price and would be the most logical place to acquire it.
