Multi-User / Educational licenses as low as $1 per user or $100 per site
(see SITE_LIC.TXT for details)

(This program uses VBRUN300.DLL available everywhere online FREE, ask your service provider if you do not already have it)

Rewards for Registering. If you register the full $22 version, you will get the registered version of Cubix- Squared, Cubix-The Wall (all 6 levels!) and the weird triangular Tetrix level. As an additional incentive to get people to register EARLY since if people put it off, they usually won't at all, if you register before mid-summer 1995 you will qualify for a 25% discount of ALL future Cubix for Windows games. On top of that, the first 1000 people who register will receive Cubix- Cubed FREE as soon as it is complete and ready to ship. Since you have The Wall you can also register just it for only $12 plus $4 dollars shipping to get a disk without the shareware restrictions on the levels, Snowflake, Plus, Shelfed, Darth V., and Tic Toe.

Better than free? If I could afford to (and believe me, I can't), I guess I would like to let everyone have this game free. Actually, that is what I have done from one point of view, but it is not supposed to be that way. People are supposed to register it and with that money I am supposed to be able to go on and write newer and better programs. That theoretically is how it works anyway, though it still is an unproved axiom. What some other programmers do is price their programs high to make up for the fact that most people who use a program will not register it. I am determined not to follow that scenario and continue to price the programs as low as possible, not to penalize the honest few, even if it one day means I will no longer be able to afford to make newer and better programs. Please give this program to as many people as you know who might like it, or try uploading it for me to your local BBS's (they will appreciate it too, you know). I am lucky to afford to cover the main online services, and the 'net, so I cannot even begin to cover the tens of thousands of local BBS's as well. With luck and lots of registrations the price will go DOWN on future versions making your discount go even further.
