

Copyright ©1992 by Scott Hess. All Rights Reserved.

User's Group Licensing

For licensing purposes, I consider a user's group to be any group of three or more people who meet on a scheduled basis to discuss computers and their usage in a structured manner. Simply talking about computers at your local pizza hang-out is not good enough.

While I do not require a user's group to specify a contact person for the group, I would appreciate it if a contact person were specified, for the same reasons listed under Site License. Including a contact person's name does not imply that the contact person will be registered - if a registration is desired for the contact person, enter the contact person into the User area. The Announcements field of the registration panel should be used to indicate an address to which update and other informational announcements should be sent for dissemination to the user's group via email alias or newsletter.

Though the group must send all registrations in a single bundle, each user registered is considered to be a separate license.