

Hackers on WinMX?

I suspect there may be some "users" hacking winmx. Had a strange experience tonight (29.may) when a user requested a file of mine,- found nothing in his browser so I cancelled, he kept coming back, I sent some pissed off messages, blablabla, (guess you all now that story...) later I browsed his folder again and suddenly I was able to view his files (mostly bad amateur porn), and found an ebook file on how to hack WinMX to get instant download of the file you want. At the same time I tried to rename the file he had requested but was unable to do so because the file was in use (and nobody was dl'ing it...). I sent a message to the user asking him to explain and suddenly I was able to access that file. I also think the transfer speed has behaved strange lately.

Of course all this may be "late night paranoia" (that's why I hesitate to name that user) but it's too many pieces that connects for me to just write it off as that.

Thought I should let you know.

p.s. The answer I got from the user was "hack winmx is bullshit!"
I really hope that is true.

"Hobbywood"