

Management & Supervision of International Postgraduate Students

Taking place at the Royal Society, Edinburgh on 5th December, the Management & Supervision of International Postgraduate Students workshop is aimed at academic staff who supervise international research students, directors of postgraduate studies with responsibility for overseas research students, and staff development officers who "train" supervisors of international research students. The objective is to enable participants to identify the key and unique issues for supervisors when working with international research students, and to develop strategies for managing these issues.

Participants will be provided with a summary of what the evidence of research on the subject can teach us, and will be encouraged, through guided group discussions, to consider where supervisors fit within the structure for meeting the needs of international research students within their own HEI. They will also explore possible and appropriate supervisor responses to the challenges faced by international research students.

The cost of the workshop is £145 for UKCGE members & £185 for non-members. This includes lunch and refreshments.
