

Go to the movies?

What do all these things have in common? Stories!

Why do people read?

- * Stories nourish our emotional lives.
- They let us enter new worlds.
- * They broaden our perspectives.
- * They help us develop thought.
- * They help encourage new ideas.
- * In general, stories change us!

If this story had a recipe, what INGREDIENTS would you need to make it work?

In other words, what makes this a story worth reading?

What does a story need to work?

Characters.

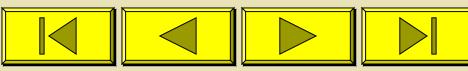

Setting(s).

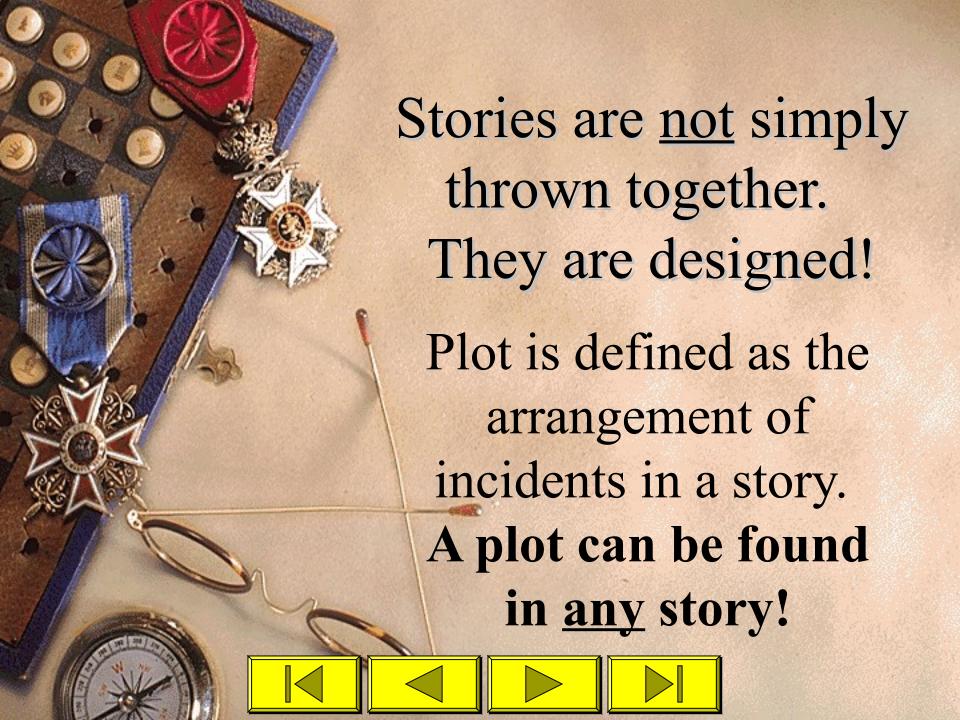

Symbolism.

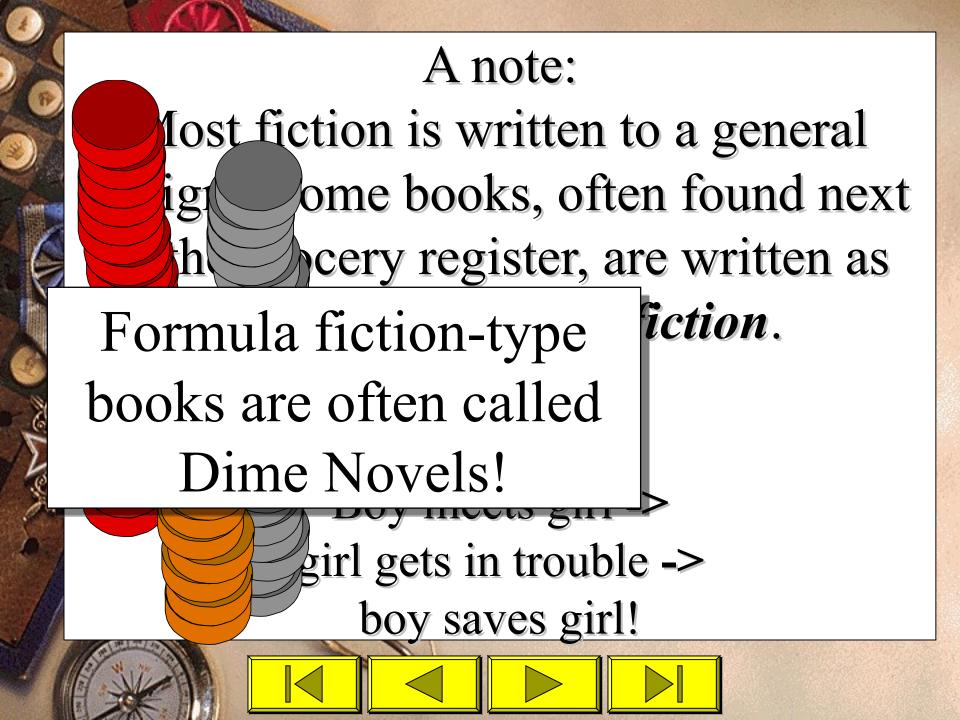

Themes.

General Plot Design

Conflict

Climax

Rising Action  Falling Action

Exposition

Resolution

Plot Design: Exposition

Exposition:

Provides background information about character(s) and/or story.

Exposition

Plot Design: Conflict

Conflict

Conflict:

The struggle between opposing forces.

E.g. Bill must save the girl from King Kong.

Jimmy wants to steal the candy.

Plot Design: Resolution

Denouement/Resolution:

The result or conclusion of the plot's conflict.

E.g. The criminal goes to jail.

Denouement/ Resolution

Can you figure out the plot of a story?

Directions:

- 1) Read the story of the hare and the turtle.
- 2) Identify the exposition, the conflict, the climax, and the resolution.

The hare accepted and the race began.

Comfortable with his speed, the hare laid down and took a nap. The turtle continued steadily on and "raced" by.

The hare awoke to the sound of the crowd congratulating the turtle for winning.

STORIES OFTEN CONTAIN SUBPLOTS!

SUBPLOTS are stories within stories.

Be careful to not mix the plot with the subplots.

What do you know?

What is the exposition?

What is the conflict?

What is the climax?

What is the resolution?

For 99 percent of all novels, conflict is the core of the plot. Without it, there is no tension and there's no reason to turn the page.
