

EF's E-mail Bag

Warren and Jon,

I want to thank you for making your excellent material available in such a useable electronic form. I found your EF files in the CIN forum on Compuserve a few months ago and have since been downloading them from the gate.net site on the internet. I have enjoyed every issue and have shared them with a number of my friends who are preachers. It was good to hear in your March issue that you teamed up with Mark Copeland in the class you taught at Florida College on using the Information Superhighway. I'll bet it was an excellent class. I wish I could have been there.

Let me say also that I appreciated Warren's encouragement in the March issue to "Upload the gospel." It appears that you guys and brother Mark are pioneers of sorts... In response to Warren's challenge in the March issue, I am currently working on putting some sermon material into executable form for uploading to Compuserve. I'm encouraging others to do the same thing. Thanks for the material. Keep up the good work.

Sincerely,
Oregon Minister

EF RESPONSE:

Thanks for your compliments and we are looking forward to seeing your material online. By the way, Mark Copeland's very good "Executable Outlines" series is available on AOL, but not in the "publications" section of the religious library area as is EF. Instead, AOL has assigned his series a special slot under the "Christianity" heading.

~~~~~

Would it be possible to have you include me in mailing list for the expository files? Or, do people log onto AOL to get all of the files? I guess what I am asking is there some kind of auto distribution for your work?

Thank you.
Reader in Cyberspace

EF RESPONSE:

We have no mailing list for the automatic distribution of Expository Files at this time. But our publication can be found on AOL, CIS and on the Internet.
