DESCRIPTION

The National Computer Security Center has produced two computer security films entitled "Access: The Ins and Outs" and "Access Control". They are designed to promote general awareness and knowledge of computer security.

The first film, "Access: The Ins and Outs" introduces the realities of computer security, vulnerabilities of computer systems and the program of the National Computer Security Center.

The second film, "Access Control" depicts security problems that were introduced in the first film, and provides some solutions. In so doing, it will explain the meaning of "trusted" and how trustworthiness can be achieved.

The estimated running time for each film is approximately 20 minutes. Both films are contained on the same tape.
