

Forty Thieves keeps a record of how you are doing. The statistics window will let you check on the number of games you have played, how many games you have won, your average score and the current score of the game in progress.

A game will only be counted in the statistics if you actually move a card. So, if you don't like a deal, you may redeal with no penalty. (Note: When you finish a game, the statistics will not be updated until you start your next game or quit - the game is still in progress until you win, or decide to start a new game.)

You may undo as many moves as you like with the "Undo" command in the Edit menu. Don't forget that once you've moved a card, the game will count toward your statistics (even if you Undo all of your moves!)

The statistics are calculated as follows:

- The score is the accumulated value of the cards you have played up until this point.

(Ace = 1 point, Two = 2 points, ... , Queen = 12 points, and King = 13 points)

- The average score is calculated across the number of games you have played.
